Hartsfield and Councilmen Pledge Rigid Economy

PAY ROLL OF CITY MAY BE REDUCED, JOBS ABOLISHED

Budget Satisfactory to Auditors Is Promised as Inducement to Clearing House To Lift Ban on City Scrip Absorption.

BOUNDS OF INCOME TO RULE SPENDING

Mayor-Nominee Demands
$35,000 Recently Voted
Over Veto of Key Be Rescinded by Council.

Mayor-nominee William B. Hartsfield and a dozen of the 18 members of the 1937 council yesterday pledged themselves to draft a budget satisfactory to auditors and to live within it next year, as a compromise inducement to members of the Atlanta Clearing House Association to absorb $800,000 worth of city scrip and to continue to co-operate in financing the municipality.

The vote was taken immediately after Hartsfield had asserted:

"I want this council to know what it is doing."

"It is imposing the most rigid program of economy under which this city ever operated."

"It will force reduction in the number of employees, the lopping from pay rolls of useless persons."

"It means that not a single salary raise can be made."

"It may mean a reduction in city services."

Would Rescind Pay Raise.

The mayor-nominee followed this with a demand that the council rescind several weeks ago over Mayor Key's veto and in defiance of an appeal by Hartsfield to sustain the mayor, be rescinded.

"That will cost the city government $140,000 next year and the administration cannot stand it," he added.

There was considerable conjecture.

Hartsfield Proposed For All Committees

William B. Hartsfield will be the first mayor in Atlanta's history to serve as a full-fledged member of every committee of city council, if plans of a special council group, designated to consolidate and regroup committees for 1937, materialize.

Councilman John A. White, chairman of the committee working out the merger of present committees to conform to the reduction of council from a body of 39 members to 18, has called a final session of his body today, and recommendations will be filed Monday in council.

It was reported last night the major recommendation will be that the mayor serve on and vote as a member of every committee of council.

The plan, however, will be merged and consolidated to 18.

The finance, sewers, electric lights and streets committees will have one member from each of the newly established six wards, and functions of other committees will be fused with them, and with more than a dozen others to be recommended.

POLICEMAN NAMED MYSTERY DEEPENS IN NUMBERS PROBE IN TAYLOR SLAYING

Repairman, Admits He Wrote 'Bug'; Failure To Pay Is Cited in Court.

Charges that an Atlanta policeman was connected with the "bug" racket were made in Fulton criminal court yesterday by Ben Kaplan, operator of a shoe shop on Peachtree near Tenth street, who entered a plea of guilty before Judge Jesse M. Wood, to "writing numbers."

Kaplan told the court that he gave "Officer Maddox" a $2.25 bribe and that when the number played fell that day the policeman told him he had "failed to turn the money in."

The shoe repairer was brought into court on the accusation of C. T. Johnson, who charged he played the $2.25 on a "lead number," but that Kaplan would not pay off when his number hit. Kaplan told Judge Wood he had asked "Officer Maddox" about the money and that the officer admitted he had not "turned it in" and subsequently refused to "do any thing about it."

Police Lieutenant J. A. McKibben was in court when Kaplan made his statement, and said last night he will take the matter up with Chief of Police T. O. Sturdivant. Alderman Frank H. Reynolds, chairman of the public safety committee, said he had not heard of the incident and would make no comment at present.

Solicitor John S. McClelland, of criminal court, impounded the record of the incident and would not let it go until he had secured the public safety committee might see fit to take it.

Kaplan asserted he had told Chief Sturdivant of the matter but that the latter had refused to take it up.

LOYALIST PLANES WIN 3 AIR BATTLES OVER RED CAPITAL

With 70 New Ships, Defenders Gain Aerial Supremacy; Premier Returns; Rebels Retreat.

By The Associated Press.

MADRID, Nov. 13.—Hard-fighting defenders of Madrid repulsed attacks in savage battles on land and in the air today.

Rooftop watchers in Madrid saw four airplanes—three of them Fascist—shot down in whirling spins. Four additional insurgent planes, the government announced, were forced down behind their own lines.

Three spectacular air battles over Madrid's streets preceded a sudden infantry counter-offensive which the government said forced the enemy back three miles along the Talavera road west of Madrid.

An international column of anti-Fascists captured three insurgent batteries near Sumera, the government reported, while their own batteries shelled Aravaca heavily.

Many Madrid officials who fled to Valencia at the outset of the Fascist siege drifted back in the capital tonight.

Officials Return.

Minister of State Julio Alvarez del Vayo held a series of conferences with the defense council of international aspects of the situation. (It was reported that Premier Francisco Largo Caballero unexpectedly returned from the government's temporary headquarters in Valencia. The purpose of his visit was not known.)

At dusk an insurgent and a government plane crashed after a duel high over the capital.

The pilot of the government ship parachuted down near the city. His plane roared down and struck behind a cathedral.

The insurgent ship crashed in the city.

FOREIGN HOLDINGS WORRY ROOSEVELT

President Seeks Plan To Prevent Market Crisis If They Are Liquidated.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 13.—(AP)—With foreign investors holding huge quantities of American securities, President Roosevelt today termed such accumulations a dangerous factor and announced a study of methods for avoiding any unsettling consequences.

The Federal Reserve Board and the Treasury were requested to seek legislation, if necessary—methods of controlling foreign purchases of domestic stocks and bonds and of meeting, in orderly fashion, any situation arising from the sudden sale of foreign-owned shares.

Officials, including Chairman James M. Landis, of the Securities Commission, made clear that the recent activity of the stock market, carrying many issues to postwar prices, had been a study of methods for avoiding any unsettling consequences.

Keep Currencies Steady.

Mr. Roosevelt, at a press conference, said that his first concern was to keep the currencies of the principal nations relatively stable, in pursuance of the current "gentleman's agreement" between France, Great Britain and the United States.

Foreign investors, he said, furnished a most important power in the purchasing of stocks, and if such purchases were carried beyond a certain point, a dangerous situation resulted.

In the recent past, he continued, private groups and syndicates, by si-

SHIPPERS REJECT NEW PEACE OFFER

More Strikes Threaten; Maritime Union To Revamp, Resubmit Plan.

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 13.—(AP)—Another "last hope" formula for maritime strike peace negotiations went into the wastebasket today while new walkout threats developed on both sides of the continent and violence marked picketing on the Houston waterfront.

The seagoing unions offered to negotiate if the employers would grant them control of their hiring halls and accept a modified proposal for penalizing workers violating any agreement to be reached.

Shippers rejected it flatly and said the opposing sides were "still as far apart as ever on fundamentals."

Assistant Secretary of Labor Edward F. McGrady, who presented the union proposal to the employers, announced the formula would be revamped and resubmitted to the shippers immediately.

Shippers reportedly have watched for days for possible signs of White House action in the strike. President Roosevelt said no special federal mediation was planned for the immediate future.

Strikes Increase.

A walkout of 600 textile workers from a San Francisco bag company brought to 11 the number of Pacific coast strikes in progress besides the maritime strike. These strikes involve 37,000 maritime workers and about 9,600 other union members.

Philadelphia longshoremen met to discuss a renewal of their strike after shipowners rejected their demands and brought a week's truce to an end.

In Los Angeles 450 shipyard workers avowedly were ready to strike tomorrow unless employers met wage and hour demands.

Two sailors reported they were beaten and a woman said she was kidnapped in Houston, where a strike of seamen has been in progress for two weeks. A member of the strike committee asked protection from "two New York gunmen" who he said were imported to kill him.

The woman, May Gibson, 23, who had been transporting pickets to and from their posts, told police she was seized by three men, driven out of town, warned against further picketing and released.

New York leaders of striking seamen asserted they had tied up 274 ships with a walkout of 19,296 men on the east coast. Shippers said the figure was "too high" and at Tampa, Fla., International Seamen's Union officers opposing the strike declared more than 30 vessels were stopped.

Strike Terms 'Futile.'

Ira A. Campbell, counsel for the American Steamship Owners' Association, described the maritime strike as "futile." Shipowners, he added, believe it was due to discontent fostered by "anti-American influences at work, aiming at destruction of the social order."

Alaska's delegate in congress, Anthony J. Dimond, announced he would ask Secretary Ickes to remove Colonel O. F. Olson as general manager of the federal-owned Alaska railroad for suspending service because of the maritime strike. The line is the only one running into the Alaskan interior from the coast.

Popular Ballot Table In Presidential Vote

By The Associated Press.

Presidential election returns compiled by the Associated Press up to last night (Friday), still incomplete, with 8,407 districts unreported, showed:

Roosevelt, 26,390,606.
Landon, 16,168,619.
(Roosevelt's plurality, 10,221,987.)

Lemke (Union party), 655,314.
Thomas (Socialist), 111,152.
Browder (Communist), 57,052.
Colvin (Prohibitionist), 15,590.
Aiken (Social-Laborer), 6,444.
Total vote, 43,404,777.

Complete returns, available only after canvass of the vote in various states, will increase the total to probably more than 45,000,000.

6 MEASURES DUE TO FACE CONGRESS

Roosevelt Backs Two and Revision of Surplus Tax Law Is Held Probable.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 13.—(AP)—Three jobs for the next congress were suggested today by President Roosevelt and Senator Carter Glass, Democrat, Virginia, while other administration leaders set to work on a dozen pressing legislative tasks.

At least six major measures appeared certain of consideration although the President made it plain that his legislative program would not take shape for many weeks.

He expressed hope in a White House press conference for passage of a farm tenancy bill, providing federal aid for farm purchases. Chairman Jones, Democrat, Texas, of the house agriculture committee, already has predicted that such legislation is "assured."

Minor changes in the Tennessee Valley act, placing heavier stress on land use and conservation activities, also received the President's endorsement.

Tax Revision Seen.

Revision of the tax on undistributed corporate surpluses seemed increasingly probable as Glass, chairman of the appropriations committee, announced he favored "some changes" of an unspecified nature in the undistributed corporate profits tax law.

Simplification of the federal tax structure has been studied for more than three months by a joint committee of the house and senate.

Other legislation apparently headed

A.F. OF L. PREDICTS REBEL UNION FALL

Federation Head Says 'We're Going To Organize the Unorganized.'

TAMPA, Fla., Nov. 13.—(AP)—With William Green predicting complete collapse of John L. Lewis' revolt against the American Federation of Labor, the federation's metal trades department today proposed that Lewis' ten rebel unions be expelled.

The department convention instructed John P. Frey, its president, to introduce in the A. F. of L. convention next week a resolution calling for revocation of the rebels' charters. This would cost the federation about one-third of its membership and, labor leaders say, would result in a long and bitter labor war.

Frey's charges of "insurrection" against the 10 unions led the federation's executive council two months ago to suspend them. Their "insurrection" consisted of trying to bring all the workers in each big industry into one big union, without regard for traditional A. F. of L. craft lines.

Lewis, their leader, is president of the United Mine Workers.

His voice frequently breaking with emotion as he talked to the federation's building and metal trades department convention, Green said the A. F. of L.—not Lewis with his "vaporous idealism"—would bring the great masses of workers into the ranks of organized labor.

"We're going to organize the unorganized of America, and we're going to organize them into the American Federation of Labor," he shouted.

The delegates, firm believers in organization of workers by craft rather than by industry, roared their approval.

Green also forecast a "great building boom" for the immediate future with re-employment of all building craftsmen now idle, and a general increase in wages.

He opened his remarks on the Lewis rebellion, principal issue before the federation's general convention next week, by congratulating both the metal and building craftsmen on their loyalty to the A. F. of L.

He told the building workers that

GOVERNOR-ELECT DENIES REPORTED APPROVAL OF PLAN

Rivers Rejects Scheme Requiring All Recipients To Take Pauper's Oath; To Leave Final Decision for General Assembly.

MANY SUGGESTIONS ALREADY OFFERED

Most Feasible Program Calls for Amendment to State Constitution With Election in June.

By L. A. FARRELL.

No definite plan for payment of old-age pensions in Georgia has been determined on, although it appears certain a statewide vote on the proposal will be held in a called general election in the spring.

This was learned yesterday as Governor-elect E. D. Rivers emphatically denied reports that a social security commission, operating under the state board of control, would be set up for the payment of the pensions under a legislative act which would require all pension recipients to take a pauper's oath.

The Governor-elect made his statement following publication of an article in Atlanta newspapers which asserted he had approved a pension plan drawn by a present assistant attorney general of the state, appointed by Governor Talmadge. The Governor-elect said he had not conferred with the state official and that no pension plan would be approved by him until he has talked the entire matter out with the members of the general assembly with whom he is now conferring.

Many Plans Proposed.

A large number of pension plans have been developed by Governor-elect Rivers and by persons close to him and by others interested in the pension movement.

The most feasible yet submitted, and which is known to be getting the most serious consideration from the governor-elect, is one which would result in the general assembly, during its forthcoming session, submitting an amendment. Under the law the general assembly may submit the amendment and it may set up a general election so the state may vote on the submitted amendment.

The law does require that there be eight weeks between the call for the election and the balloting in order to permit the advertising of the amendment and to give the voters time to consider the amendment which would be enacted.

Temporary Program.

For the time between the first of the year and the time for the balloting he is expected a temporary pension plan would be set up in order that Georgians might participate in those funds provided by the federal government and which are said to be waiting only a concrete movement on the part of the state to set up a permanent pension program.

"No pension plan has been approved by me and I have authorized no one to speak for me or w. at may come to pass," Governor-elect Rivers said following the publication of news articles "revealing" his reported approval of the plan submitted by the Talmadge-appointed assistant attorney general.

"I am now in the process of a se-

Cobb Asks: Does East Like Soot?

By IRVIN S. COBB.

(Copyright, 1936, by North American Newspaper Alliance, Inc.)

NEW YORK, Nov. 13.—Los Angeles may have its drawbacks (loud crows, "No!" from all men, including the foreign-born ones), but she certainly spoils a fellow for the clinker-laden, smut-freighted atmosphere of many other cities.

Take Chicago, where the weather bureau, if so inclined, frequently might report a two-inch fall of soot. Or Pittsburgh, where a chap comes home for a week looking as though he'd been cleaning out a soft-coal stove. New York is nothing to brag on, either. Leave a snow-white pup out over night and he could pass for a Dalmatian.

Yet hestling engineers say that proper smoke consumers would produce such saving in fuel cost as to pay for themselves in about one year. Can it be these big city folks would rather not save money, or just naturally don't care a darn?

Or possibly the citizens fear they might collapse their lungs and choke to death did they start breathing something remotely resembling fresh air?

Philadelphian Sought For Threat on F. D. R.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 13.—(AP)—A warrant was issued late today for the arrest of a John A. Bartenback, of Philadelphia, on charges of sending letters threatening President Roosevelt.

The warrant was turned over to United States Secret Service Agent Green and County Detective Henry C. Doyle.

It was reported that Bartenback was being held in the county prison here awaiting trial on another charge, and the two officers left for the jail immediately to make the arrest.

Police revealed that three letters were sent to Mr. Roosevelt—two in June and one in August—threatening his life. Authorities checked the missive for fingerprints, police said, and traced them to Bartenback.

Contents of the letters were not revealed.

JACKSON, Ohio, Nov. 13.—Federal agents shot and captured a long-sought desperado today in a spectacular raid on a little poultry farm—his refuge for a year with his wife and three children.

The prisoner, Reese Bailey, 30, was wounded three times when he attempted to shoot his way out of a trap laid at his home, nine miles northwest of here.

He had been sought since he escaped from the state penitentiary at Raleigh, N. C., on March 22, 1932. He was under indictment for violation of the national motor vehicle theft act, and for the murder of Town Marshal Bert Lemley during a bank robbery at Rosalia, Wash.

FEDERATION PREDICTS FALL OF REBEL UNIONS

The A. F. of L. was a "religion" to them.

"I know as I know I'm standing here this morning that there is no siren song that will bring the building trades to try untried economic experimentation," he added. "As long as there is a building trades department, we will have an American Federation of Labor and a United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners of America."

He then recalled that the coming convention would be the federation's fifty-sixth.

"Who is there to think that this great institution can be wiped out by the wave of a hand?" he asked.

"The federation," he added, "has reached down into the vitals of our economic life."

"The knights of labor, with their one big union, came, assaulted us, and disappeared. The Eugene V. Debs movement came, flashed, and passed out. The I. W. O. came, made a little noise, and left."

"Like a great oak tree, the federation's roots sink deeper with every storm."

Green pointed out he was a member of Lewis' United Mine Workers and that he knew the members of that union "died down in their hearts" for the A. F. of L.

Judgment of Heads.

The issue would be decided in the convention, however, "not by emotion but by the judgment of our hard heads," he said.

At a later press conference Green nervously thumbed a summons from the miners' executive board to appear before it next Monday to "show cause" why he could not "cease and desist" from associating with his union's "enemies."

He smiled at the legal phraseology, said much of it was "ambiguous," and pointed out he could not be expelled from the union without a trial by his local at Coshocton, Ohio.

The federation's legislative program, he said, would share the convention spotlight with the Lewis rebellion.

Green listed as the principal measures in which labor was interested the Black-Conner 30-hour work week bill, the O'Mahoney industrial licensing bill to require industry to conform to specified labor standards and the Wagner low-cost housing bill.

The Wagner bill, he said, would be enacted at the next session of congress. As a result, he said, home building would boom to such an extent that there likely would be a shortage of building labor.

Green declined to predict whether the convention would vote to expel the Lewis rebels. There was little hope now of any immediate peace, he added.

The federation, he said, would make no attempt to organize steel workers while the Lewis organization campaign was on.

He also said the federation probably could maintain its non-partisan political policy in 1940 and predicted the convention would "not consider seriously" the formation of a farmer-labor party.

The metal trades department also adopted a resolution "to withhold any further support of those (suspended) organizations, and not to demand their label until they comply with the laws of the A. F. of L."

A. F. of L. members are supposed to buy only goods that bear a label showing they were made by union workmen. Two of the largest rebel unions, the Amalgamated Clothing Workers and the International Ladies' Garment Workers, place union labels on their products.

The same resolution further provided "that owing to the fact that Charles Howard, of the Typographical Union, is actively assisting the C. I. O., we will withhold our support of their label until his organization compels him to cease his destructive operations."

Can't Destroy A. F. of L.

In his talk to the metal trades department, Green said:

"They can destroy me, they can denounce me, I can go on my way and be forgotten. But the A. F. of L. will live."

He accused Lewis of dividing the American labor movement to the advantage of employers and said "there is no issue in labor that transcends solidarity and unity."

The split, he added, "runs like a knife through the federation, its state federations of labor and city central labor bodies."

He predicted a "real fight" during the coming year, running through all the federation's subdivisions and added that "we will be ready to give it to them."

2. New neutrality laws, to replace the present act expiring May 1. Chairman McReynolds, Democrat, Tennessee, of the house foreign affairs committee, and Senator Charles McNary, Republican, North Dakota, both are drafting anti-war legislation.
3. A relief bill, probably to be submitted by the President late in the session.
4. Senator Holt, Democrat, West Virginia, bitter critic of administration relief policies, gave warning today he would demand a thorough audit of the Works Progress Administration before additional funds are appropriated.
5. A dozen other problems will clamor for attention when the session opens January 3, returning congressmen said today.

Much New Deal legislation, for example, will expire in 1937 unless it is renewed by congress. The list includes the President's authority to devalue the dollar, the Reconstruction Finance Corporation's lending power, the Public Works Administration, the Electric Farm and Home Authority, and the reciprocal trade program.

Reorganize Bureaus.

Three committees—named by the senate, house, and President Roosevelt—are expected to submit blueprints for a thorough-going reorganization of executive departments.

Senator Guffey, Democrat, Pennsylvania, has pledged himself to press for reorganization.

Afraid of Defeat by Tech Team, Says President-Elect of Alabama

Dr. Richard Clarke Foster Returns to Atlanta To See Football Game.

Dr. Richard Clarke Foster, president-elect of the University of Alabama, who assumes that office January 1, led a contingent of Alabamians who came to Atlanta yesterday for the football game today between their university and Georgia Tech's Yellow Jackets.

"We came to see our boys win," said Dr. Foster, "but we are fearfully afraid we are going to see them lose."

Dr. Foster, World War veteran and one of Alabama's most distinguished attorneys, was elected to the university presidency to succeed Dr. George Hutcheson Denny, who, after 25 years as president, became chancellor of the institution. Prior to his service at Alabama, Dr. Denny was president of Washington and Lee University.

Dr. Foster is well known in Atlanta, having been a trainee at the first officers' training camp at Fort McPherson in World War days, and later serving at Camp Gordon, with the 221st Field Artillery of the 82nd division, the famous "All American."

He was discharged after the war with the rank of captain.

He is a native of Tuscaloosa, where he has been practicing law since 1919. He was graduated from Alabama in 1914 and from the Harvard Law School in 1917.

For enactment of a coal bill, regulating prices and trade practices.

Other congressmen have demanded revival of NRA wage and hour standards, through federal licensing of corporations engaged in interstate trade, or by other methods.

A housing program, amendments to the soil conservation act, and modifications of the social security law were viewed as certain to come up for consideration early in the session.

Appropriations of from $300,000,000 to $100,000,000 to implement the flood control bill passed by the last congress also is expected. The measure authorizes more than $350,000,000 worth of projects, scattered in virtually every state, but did not set aside money to finance them.

furnished Denhardt's $25,000 bond guaranteeing appearance at an examining trial in New Castle November 20, advised him against staying at the Denhardt farm home on an 800-acre estate near LaGrange, where he had secluded himself since the tragedy.

Beckham Overstreet, of counsel for Denhardt, who said the defense would give exhumation of Mrs. Taylor's body "immediate attention," assigned his office force to briefing Kentucky's law on autopsies.

"Should the prosecution suggest such a step we shall insist upon being represented at every stage of the autopsy," he declared. Overstreet said Denhardt, who was cited for service on the St. Mihiel front during the World War, was prostrated by the tragedy, which "had turned a quiet life of retirement in which he hoped to spend his declining years into a worse hell than anything he underwent on the battlefields of France."

Wirt Turner, Jr., Nashville, attorney for the Garr and Taylor families, said he had not heard of any exhumation proposal and did not know what the attitude of relatives would be.

Associated with Overstreet in defending Denhardt are Rodes K. Myers, of Bowling Green, a member of the state legislature, and John Marshall Berry, of New Castle.

ECONOMY IS PLEDGED BY COUNCIL MEMBERS to operate within the city's budget year without some reduction of the deficit would satisfy bankers, but that was the only stipulation allowed in the resolution.

Milam and B. Graham West, city controller, were instructed to confer with Jack C. Savage, city attorney, and have a resolution prepared pledging the new council along the lines stipulated.

To Be Given Glenn.

It will be circulated at council's meeting Monday and, when the incoming members have signed it, West will deliver it to Thomas K. Glenn, president of the Atlanta Clearing House Association, and ask that the city script be absorbed and that banks co-operate in meeting other fiscal demands to be made on the city treasury.

The new group turned down definitely any suggestion of a pledge that the deficit will be reduced next year, despite the insistence of Hartfield, Milam and Hailey.

For the first time in history, a new mayor and an entirely new council was assembled more than a month before taking office to pledge that the municipality would operate the following year within its budget.

Although bankers themselves maintained a hands-off attitude in the discussions, Hailey called on Milam "to tell them the demands of the bankers are because they have been used to them and understand what they want better than the rest of us."

Those Present.

Members of the new council, who attended the conference were:

Aldermen G. Dan Bridges, Frank H. Reynolds, Robert Carpenter and Hailey, and Councilmen Howard Haile, William M. Knight, Frank Beck, Frank Wilson, George B. Lytle, John A. White, John T. Marler and E. A. Minor.

Others could not be reached on such short notice, it was said.

Hailey reviewed the city figures showing the city's deficit has increased annually since 1932 despite pledges of finance committee chairmen and Mayor Key. Milam asserted he and Key had pledged their best efforts to prevent an increase this year, but added, "We could not help it."

Councilman Aubrey Milam, finance committee chairman, presided at the informal conference held by the incoming mayor and his council. Milam led an unsuccessful fight to have a minimum of $50,000 pledged to reduce the city deficit, placed at $3,543,933 by members of the clearing house.

John A. White, fourth ward councilman, insisted the pledge to operate within the city's income only be included.

"If the banks come back with a counter-proposition, we can take it up then," White asserted.

ALIEN HOLDINGS IN U.S. DISTURB ROOSEVELT

multaneous attacks upon the franc, the guilder, or the pound have upset not only the value of the currency under attack but also the exchange rates of other currencies.

While this had provided a disturbing factor, he added, it seemed to have been cared for by the "gentleman's agreement." Now, he said, the problem was to see what could be done about a top-heavy situation which could cause the same effect as an attack upon currency.

Keep Check on Orders.

The accumulation of large security holdings in one nation by another, he said in summary, is a dangerous factor, not only to the currency of that nation but to everybody else's currency.

At the same time, it developed that the Securities Commission has been keeping a day-to-day check upon foreign purchases on domestic exchanges, including the nation of origin of all orders and the name of the security purchaser.

Landis, who confirmed the information, said foreign buying seemed "pretty well distributed," with one nation leading one day, and another the next. Most of it, he said, went into common stocks.

Asked whether the commission had any plan for keeping a sudden liquidation of foreign holdings on an orderly basis, he replied:

"It is something one has to watch."

One method of meeting such a situation, and one that has been under discussion, would be to have the stock exchanges impose a rule similar to that current on the grain exchanges, under which trading ceases for the day when prices have moved over a previously specified range.

Asked whether the recent developments in the market were behind today's announcement, Landis replied that "the activity of the stock market makes us a little more alert to the situation."

In 1929 foreign investors had holdings here only slightly less in volume than at present. During the depression, they started selling and in 1931 and 1932 withdrew about $1,000,000,000 in gold. At the old dollar value this amounted to virtually one-quarter of the total holdings.

Foreign investments are again at an all-time high, approximately $300,000,000,000. The government is seeking some means of preventing possible sudden withdrawal with a repetition of the 1931-1932 outflow.

One of the reasons the government does not want to stack up the gold too high. It would gladly find reason to export about $500,000,000.

The attempt to check the excess of reserves was made by the reserve board last August when it increased reserve requirements 50 per cent. Excess order they were reduced to $1,700,000,000. Now, due to gold imports, they are back up to $2,260,000,000.

Heavy foreign investors have been Great Britain, France, Switzerland, Holland and Germany. Any prediction as to whether foreign investors might dump their securities on the stock market.

The accumulation of foreign holdings of American stocks has accompanied the huge flow of gold which has brought to the United States more than half of the world's stocks of that metal. Disturbing influences in Europe, leading investors to seek other fields for their money, has been behind the gold flow.

Secretly more than two months ago Secretary Morgenthau told Congress that foreign holdings should be no cause for alarm, and constitute "no threat to continued recovery." Even if developments should require only a small reduction in the proportion of our gold holdings, it would be affected, Morgenthau added.

The flow of gold to the United States, it was pointed out, has brought to the country from which it has come and has been of no particular help in maintaining the money and credit policies of the administration.

When the group had voted to pledge to live within its budget, Councilman Hailey said:

"And when some damned fool tries to pass a resolution passing all new statements, just let the mayor veto it and we'll stand behind him."

Councilman Wilson asserted in answer to a query from Hartfield as to how the city should live within its budget and reduce the deficit, "Just cut out unnecessary expenses."

"I tried to do that last year and the only member of council who would stand behind me was councilman Childs."

RAIL STRIKE MEDIATION UNDER WAY, LECHE SAYS

BATON ROUGE, La., Nov. 13.—(AP)—Governor Richard W. Leche's peace conference in the strike of transportation workers on the Louisiana and Arkansas railway adjourned shortly before 5 o'clock this afternoon until next Wednesday. The governor said negotiations were under way.

The governor and representatives of both railroad and the striking union met to discuss the strike. The governor said that in any particular what progress had been made in their executive sessions of the past two days.

But it was indicated that statistics information would be needed for resumption of the negotiations.

The governor's statement on adjournment follows:

"Negotiations are under way and we have decided to adjourn until 2:30 Wednesday."

Several hundred transportation employees walked out September 19 in a controversy over wage claims, organization recognition claims and demands for revised working conditions.

BOTH SIDES CLAIM VICTORY IN NEW YORK

NEW YORK, Nov. 13.—(AP)—The seamen strike in the east port of New York passed its thirteenth day today with quiet along the waterfront, both sides claiming victory was in sight.

While the strikers asserted 19,299 men were out in Atlantic and gulf ports—including 70 at San Juan, P. R., in another extension of the trouble between the United States Seamen's American Association of Ship Owners asserted on the contrary the strike's back had been broken.

"The outlay strike," said R. J. Baker, president of the owners' association, "either has failed to come off or has collapsed in most ports." Conceding that fewer than 1,200 men were involved in strike here—against more than 5,000 denied by the striking seamen—he claimed strikers' assertions that more than 80 ships were tied up here.

Wally Chaperoned by Aunt Bessie; Goes to Belvedere for Week End

Mrs. Merryman To Stay With Niece Until Divorce Final.

LONDON, Nov. 13.—(AP)—"Aunt Bessie" Merryman has come to London to chaperone her niece, Wallis Simpson, during the trying six-month period until Mrs. Simpson's divorce becomes final, it was disclosed tonight.

"Aunt Bessie," who is Mrs. D. B. Merryman, of Washington, D. C., it was learned, landed at Southampton November 10 aboard the Queen Mary and was affectionately greeted by her sister-in-law at Waterloo station.

With "Aunt Bessie" lending a family atmosphere to her sumptuous new home in Cumberland terrace, Mrs. Simpson told friends she did not intend to visit the Riviera villa of her friends, Mr. and Mrs. Herman J. Rogers, of New York, as some Mayfair circles believe she would.

Friends said, however, that Mrs. Simpson might make a short visit to the continent with "Aunt Bessie," but that it would not be an extended stay.

"Aunt Bessie" is well acquainted with Mrs. Simpson's admirer, King Edward, whom she met when she was chaperoning her niece in Biarritz. Mrs. Simpson's friends said that under the chaperonage of Mrs. Merryman, the former Baltimore debutante felt she could entertain her friends, including King Edward, much more graciously than as a divorced woman living alone.

Mrs. Simpson told her friends that after the excitement attendant upon her divorce from Ernest A. Simpson, her greatest desire for the present was for seclusion and a normal routine in her household, comes final next April.

EDWARD INSPECTS BRITISH WARSHIPS

After Going Over Fleet, King Orders Rum for Sailors.

PORTLAND, England, Nov. 13.—(AP)—Amid lusty cheers, King Edward today finished his inspection of the British home fleet by ordering the signal: "Splice the main brace!"

"Serve a tot of rum to all hands." The king had royal weather for his final day of visiting the huge watchtowers of the sea, mess here in Portland harbor.

After yesterday's stormy winds and rain, bright sunshine flooded the waters as the youthful monarch, inspecting the fleet for the first time since his accession, left the flagship Nelson and sped in a fast boat along the line of battleships, cruisers, destroyers and submarines.

The fighting craft were "dressed all over" with bright-colored flags strung from one end of each ship to the next in line.

On his inspection of the Narwhal, Britain's newest submarine, the king discarded his sword and clambered down the forward hatch into the unpolished, metal-gleaming depths of the undersea ship. He remained below 15 minutes.

Returning ashore, he inspected several hundred men of the anti-submarine flotilla, also fishery and mine-sweeping units.

He drove through Portland village, nestled in the bleak coastal hills, to the naval hospital, where he chatted informally with inmates for 20 minutes. Then he returned to the harbor and proceeded to inspect the various destroyer flotillas.

Lawmakers Throw 'Haymakers' During Brawl in French Chamber

PARIS, Nov. 13.—(AP)—Leftist and Rightist French parliamentarians, shrieking invectives, punched each other in a wild melee which interrupted a session of the chamber of deputies today.

The Leftist, spurred by Rightist criticism of Socialist Premier Leon Blum and Interior Minister Roger Salengro, poured from their seats and swarmed over the Rightist benches on the right side of the chamber.

Books were scattered across the chamber and the deputies flung fists right and left before Edouard Herriot, chamber president, restored order, temporarily suspended the meeting and ordered the removal of spectators.

When the deputies reconvened, Blum won a vote of confidence, posed by a Socialist deputy, by 374 to 201.

That vote came after the chamber condemned the attacks on Salengro—charged by Rightists were being a World War deserter—by a count of 327 to 103.

The fact that the opposition vote was larger on the confidence motion was seen as indicating many Centrists who opposed the campaign against Salengro were unwilling to express approval of Blum.

Salengro Cleared. A military court of honor recently cleared Salengro of the accusation he was a traitor, saying it found he had been acquitted during the war while he was a prisoner in Germany.

The chamber army committee gave Defense Minister Edouard Daladier a vote of confidence when he refused to consider a Communist demand for reduction in the two-year compulsory military service term.

Daladier declared it was "impossible in the present international circumstances" to shorten the period. He had threatened to resign because of opposition to his armament plans.

Socialist members of the committee, who at first supported the motion for lowering the term, joined the Radical Socialists in the expression of confidence. The vote was 28 to 0, with five Communists abstaining.

The clash in the chamber broke out after a fiery debate on the Rightist charges, against Salengro, presented by Deputy Henri Begout.

The minister sat silently beside Premier Blum while Rightists yelled in the chamber: "Salengro is a deserter." Leftists countered with a similar charge against Philippe Henriot, a Rightist deputy.

When Blum mounted the speaker's stand, Jean Louis Tixier-Vignancourt, a Rightist, shouted: "Blum means war!"

A Leftist sprinted across the chamber and drove his right fist to Tixier-Vignancourt's chin.

That was the signal for the general brawl. For several minutes, more than 50 lawmakers slugged and kicked each other. Attendees who tried to separate them were bowled over.

The remainder of the legislators either shouted insults across the chamber or stalked out in dignified fashion. Herriot finally donned his hat—the signal for suspension of the session—and the more calm deputies who remained in the room separated the battling Leftists and Rightists.

As the bruised and limping parliamentarians went into the corridors, party leaders pleaded with their followers to keep their tempers in check. Half an hour later, when the chamber reconvened, Herriot urged the deputies to remember that unity and calm were necessary for proper discussion of the nation's affairs.

Blum defended Salengro's war record, referring to the decision of the military court of honor.

Salengro himself told the deputies: "I am a Socialist and also a good soldier. I am proud of my record."

His speech was greeted with a long ovation from the Leftist majority and silence from the Rightist opposition.

The officers into his confidence only after the preliminary plans were made.

Marshal Badoglio, chief of the general staff, commanded the army in its final victory, but declared he was proceeding on the strategy laid down by Mussolini and De Bono.

Prefacing Badoglio's "The Ethiopian War," Mussolini praised the marshal for his daring.

Political circles said, however, it was Il Duce's desire that the world know the conquest of Ethiopia was a Fascist idea and did not originate with the regular army.

They declared Mussolini was pleased with the book because it demonstrated beyond dispute that credit for the campaign must go to Fascism, to him, Il Duce, and to the Fascist legions and one of Mussolini's lieutenants in the 1922 march on Rome.

In his preface to Badoglio's book, Il Duce wrote:

"The war which was fought from October 3 to May 5 can rightfully be called Fascist, because it was conducted and won with the temperament of Fascism: rapidly, decisiveness, spirit of sacrifice, courage and resistance surpassing human limitations."

They declared Mussolini was pleased with the book because it demonstrated beyond dispute that credit for the campaign must go to Fascism, to him, Il Duce, and to the Fascist legions and one of Mussolini's lieutenants in the 1922 march on Rome.

In his preface to Badoglio's book, Il Duce wrote:

"The war which was fought from October 3 to May 5 can rightfully be called Fascist, because it was conducted and won with the temperament of Fascism: rapidly, decisiveness, spirit of sacrifice, courage and resistance surpassing human limitations."

LEAGUE IS REQUESTED TO RULE ON SANCTIONS

Belgium Asks Clarification of Article Applying to Sanctions.

GENEVA, Nov. 13.—(AP)—Belgium asked the League of Nations today to be specific on what help an attacked member nation "could count on."

In a note, she demanded clarification of the League covenant, particularly the article applying to sanctions against an aggressor.

(Her action followed on the recent statement of Belgian Foreign Minister Paul Henry Spaak that Belgium could not feel completely safe through sole dependence on the League.)

Belgium declared the League covenant should be reinterpreted so that all nations would join, but said it believed amendment was unnecessary.

Efforts to prevent war should be emphasized by the League, Belgium said, and measures against countries which endanger peace should be improved upon.

"The existing uncertainties as to the practical meaning of the sanctions Article 16 (providing for penalties against a nation making war) must be dispelled," the note stated. "The nations may know exactly the extent of their obligations and the help on which they can count in grave situations."

(Article 16 was applied in part by the League against Italy after the international body branded Italy the aggressor in Ethiopia.)

(Most of the League members adhered to the economic and financial sanctions which were invoked, halting trade and commercial relations with Italy. The section of the article which provides for military measures against the aggressor was not used against Italy, however.)

Belgium recommended in her note that the League try to prevent the creation of antagonistic blocs of nations, inside and outside the League.

STONE-AGE MAN'S LIFE REVEALED ON PLAINS

Southwest Flatlands Yield Evidence of Hunting Methods.

CLOVIS, N. W., Nov. 13.—(UP)—The Folsom man, who roamed the high plains of Texas and New Mexico 10,000 years ago, lacked neither courage nor ingenuity.

Members of a joint expedition from the Academy of Natural Sciences at Philadelphia, the Carnegie Museum of Washington and the University Museum of Philadelphia, found traces of the prehistoric man's prowess in Blackwater Draw, a natural fissure in the earth, near the town of Clovis, N. W., last summer.

Several specimens of the long-toothed elephants uncovered carried the stone head of a Folsom man's spear. At least one showed evidence of having died from a thrust of the human's crude weapon.

Feats of Skill Proved.

Dr. Edgar B. Howard, associate in paleontology at the academy, said the discovery of elephants killed with a spear was the first ever made.

The bone points apparently are the first of their kind to be found with prehistoric elephants," said Howard's statement. "Evidence of the early hunters' beautiful workmanship may be seen in the carefully chipped stone spear points, which are leaf-shaped in appearance and in perfect condition—some 10,000 years later.

Swamp Alder Hunters.

"One can picture the prehistoric mammoths, bugged in the swamp that once covered the site of the present excavations, being finished off by the deadly stone spears of the Folsom hunters."

"The occurrence of so many weapons and tools in place with the elephant bones precludes any doubt that man existed on the plains at the same time as the mammoths. The date may be estimated at approximately 8,000 B. C."

The summer expedition was the second made by Dr. Howard and his associates. He visited the Blackwater Draw area three years ago. Last year excavations were made in the Scandinavian country of the Folsom effort to find if the Folsom man ever inhabited those regions.

Varied Uses Made of Bonus Cash Vividly Reveal Power of Money

Georgia's World War Veterans Have Won New Hope, Mended Broken Lives, and, in Few Cases, Had Wild Fling on War Money.

By LAMAR C. BALL.
(Copyright, 1936, by North American Newspaper Alliance, Inc.)

That $3,100,000 bonus money paid by the United States to Georgia's 62,000 veterans of the World War has given within four months a successful demonstration of the power of money. It has mended broken homes; it has lifted the burden of want from struggling families; it has quickened the pace of lagging feet as it directed them to brighter futures; it has lightened the hearts of women and children and it has restored some faith in humanity among doctors, dentists and retail credit men who have been busy making "bad" in full against thousands of accounts, long outstanding.

Here and there the bonus money has been tossed to the winds, momentarily relieving thirst, moving swiftly across the bars and gambling tables in the generous production of one whole of a time.

Service officers of the American Legion in Georgia, however, agree that cases of wanton dissipation of that hard-earned war money have been few and far between. Their records reveal the greatest percentage of Georgia's veterans have put this money to substantial uses.

Sees Much Good.

"So much money distributed among so many men is certain to uncover symptoms of temporary insanity, stimulating the greatest percentage of Georgia's veterans have put this money to substantial uses."

Twenty per cent of the bonus certificates in the Georgia area are still in the postoffice uncollected.

"And I should say," Henson tells you, "that 5 per cent of the ex-servicemen in Georgia have never heard of the money and don't know the money is there for them."

"Great scott! Where are they—way back up in the mountains?"

"Some of them are, but there are a number of them right here in Atlanta who have three daily newspapers and three broadcasting stations. We'd dig them out some day."

Story of an Orphan.

Henson tells the story of Louise Wingo, 15 years old.

"She was an orphan, living with distant relatives. Her father had died some years ago; her mother more recently. She had a brother who had been killed in New Orleans but she wanted to know about an uncle—her mother's brother—who had gone to the war and had never returned to his home in Atlanta. She had heard he had died in some town near Bath, Maine. She was wondering if she, being his nearest relative, could collect his bonus money, if he had any coming to him."

"We got in touch with Legion officials at Bath and learned the town in which the man was supposed to have died was a remote village and the widow, who had been head of the household, would have to wait until the town, before they could visit the town and investigate."

"We waited. In the spring, word came."

"Then she fainted."

"The girl's uncle, as the result of war injuries, had been declared mentally incompetent and had been sent to a veterans' hospital, where he had died. Before his death he had been allowed full disability, amounting to about $100 a month, for his injuries and a guardian had been appointed. This guardian had accumulated more than $5,000, which was being held in a bank. The guardian, however, had died, leaving the money to Louise, who was now 14 years old."

"When I told this to 14-year-old Louise, she fainted."

"We collected all the money and Louise has moved on to New Orleans, reunited with her brother and the last I heard from them was that they were getting along comfortably and happily."

Henson also tells of an Atlanta man, who works for an oil company.

"He was in the navy throughout the war and was discharged when the navy was reduced to peacetime strength. He was given no discharge papers such as the army gives. A man is merely given a slip of paper showing he is detached from the service and a record of his service. When the boy was discharged, the navy was trying to hold on to the best men and let others go. He said the officer looked at him and said: 'Well, you haven't been much good, and out he went. He came home to Atlanta believing he had been dishonorably discharged.'

"He said little to friends or neighbors about having been in the navy. He was ashamed that his 'dishonorable discharge' might be dug up against him. He went to work, married and merely mentioned to his wife casually that he had served in the navy during the war. When the bonus payment came up, he made no effort to collect. He knew none would be paid to a man who had been 'dishonorable discharged.' His wife tried to urge him to see about his bonus, but he avoided her suggestions, mumbled some reply and forgot about it."

"She was determined. She saw that men would collect money. She visited our office and we examined her husband's record. We found that, not only had he been honorably discharged, but he was entitled to the maximum, about $17,000. She brought him in and he collected."

How She Used Money.

"With that money, the wife paid the last couple of notes on the house they were buying; she bought a new stove, something she had wanted ever since she had married; she bought them both new clothes; she bought a vacuum cleaner and put the rest of the money in the bank for emergencies."

"The husband has joined the American Legion and is one of our most active members. He has been relieved of that secret worry he has carried with him for more than 15 years and his mental outlook has improved."

Robert A. Garner, past commander of the American Legion, and member of its executive committee, tells of a veteran who was never able to get started in life and who, in recent years, has been living off relief, governmental jobs and personal touches.

"He took his bonus money and bought a beer garden and a saloon. He was waiting for word that he had drunk himself to death."

He Surprised 'Em.

"Instead, he showed up. He has quit drinking entirely and the beer parlor is a huge success."

There is the story of the veteran whose bonus enabled him to marry a girl he had been courting for 10 years. He was a wife whose husband is insane and who is using the money to educate the children, an expense she was unable to handle from her earnings in a store.

"He just hung around, worked hard and was divorced one week and remarried the next when the husband collected his bonus and decided to settle down to life in a store."

Major Ralph Black, of the Georgia School of Technology, tells of a number of boys who have been started on a college career with the bonus money that took care of a deficit in family finances.

"Scores of husbands and wives who were separated have been reunited and are starting life anew with the financial encouragement the bonus has given them," said Henson.

Financial Causes.

"So many separations are the result of quarrels over trivial matters, the mutual hostility between husband and wife having its origin in financial security or a wife's lack of this necessity or that comfort," says Henson.

The sudden arrival of a lump sum of money has caused many domestic troubles caused by thwarted lives. The bonus has banished discord from man, homes in Georgia. Wives have been told that their husbands had died and caused them sleepless nights. They have bought little household necessities that have lightened their work."

"Of course, there is the other side; that small percentage who squandered their funds."

One Atlanta veteran collected about $800. He bought a new automobile, although he had five children whom he was supporting haphazardly on a small income. After buying the automobile and drinking steadily for about a week, he decided he could never learn to drive a car. He arrived in Legion headquarters one morning with about $100 in his pocket, looking for some "lucky" veteran who might want a job as a chauffeur. He was quite sure, with the $100 rolled up in his pocket, he had "it" the money in the world and a lot of large affairs, such as he was certainly needed a chauffeur for a new car. His five children were at home with little to eat."

Goldigger's Victim.

Another veteran took up quarters in an expensive downtown hotel. He met a girl who saw his roll and agreed immediately to marry him. They were wed within the next few days and she and the money disappeared. He was arrested for failure to pay his hotel bill.

Jerry Rooney was the most colorful of those who scattered the bonus money to the four winds. Jerry, over a period of years, has become well known at Atlanta's police station where he spends the greater portion of his life, sleeping off drinks and working out fines.

The day Jerry collected his bonus, he appeared at the station and paid the fines of a number of his alcoholic friends. He herded them into a party and off they went. Jerry has a passion for long taxicab rides and nickel-in-the-slot phonographs.

Two policemen carried Jerry into the station house several days later, his money and friends gone. He went back into his favorite cell, unable to pay his fine.

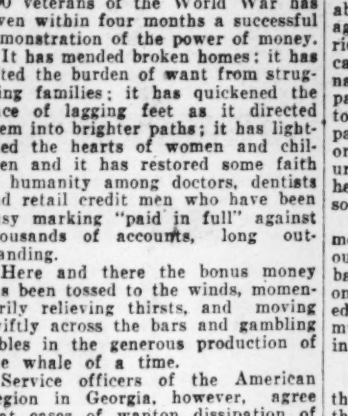

Numberless veterans, however, still have their bonus money intact. Some fathers have added it to trust funds they are building for their children.

13 Skeptics Meet in Room 1313, Decide Friday the 13th 'Is Bunk'

CHICAGO, Nov. 13.—(AP)—Thirteen men—buddled in the eerie light of 13 candles at 6:13 o'clock tonight in room 1313 of a Michigan Avenue hotel—came to this conclusion:

"This superstition stuff is the bunk."

They comprised the committee of 13 of the Antisuperstition Society. For proof of their contention, they pointed to their experiences.

Every Friday, the 13th, for five years they have gathered to dine and to court bad luck through all the popular formulas.

They shattered mirrors, spilled salt, opened umbrellas indoors, walked under ladders, trailed black cats, kicked horseshoes around the place.

And nothing ever happened.

All of them, reported Chairman Nathaniel Leverone, are alive, well, and enjoying success in business, industry and the professions.

In resolutions tonight, they called upon lawmakers and sleeping car managers to share their contempt for the evils omens by henceforth calling the thirteenth floor of hotels the fourteenth floor instead of the fourteenth and twelfth and to call the thirteenth Pullman berth No. 13 instead of some other.

Three newcomers broke bread (and mirrors) with the society members tonight—Colonel Roscoe Turner, noted flyer, Captain Thomas Callaghan, of the United States Secret Service, and Colonel Henry Barrett Chamberlin, of the Chicago crime commission.

PAPERS GIVEN OUT FREE

AS SUN FAILS ON 13TH

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla., Nov. 13.—(AP)—Friday the 13th has again proved a jinx to the famed sunshine offer of the Evening Independent as the 123rd free paper in over 26 years was given away due to the sun's failure to shine up to the paper's press time.

On Friday, December 13, 1935, St. Petersburg's record-breaking streak of 546 consecutive days of sunshine was ended. Since that time six free papers have been given away by the Independent.

That record ending Friday the 13th, however, was not the first proverbial jinx day that the Independent was forced to exercise its sunshine offer, on October 13, 1922, the citizens of the Sunshine City received copies of the paper gratis when the sun failed to shine.

Parent and Child

We parents are interested in recreation for our young folk and for the young folk of our neighbors. There are, we most heartily welcome the fine new book of 140 pages, prepared for the National Recreation Association, "Adventures in Recreation," by Weaver Weddell Pangburn.

In the introduction to this exceptional book, Dr. John Finley, president of the National Recreation Association, says:

"Here is a book which in itself is adventure—a challenge! It deals with a subject close to the hearts of you who are young. Under the skillful touch of the author it presents for your exploration the richly varied and enticing field of recreation."

"It does not stop with merely depicting the surface possibilities of recreation. It goes much farther. It shows not only what recreation is, what kinds of recreation there are, what the national recreation movement is, and to what extent this life-enriching activity is a governmental function, but it also outlines what you have a right to expect from your community, and how you can help to bring it about."

Real Challenge.

"There is a real challenge for you here to use part of your leisure to live adventurously yourself, and part of it to make it possible for others to do so, too!"

Look at some of the table of contents: What Is Recreation? The Kinds of Recreation. Recreation in Terms of Human Wishes. What Does the Community Offer? The National Recreation Movement. Recreation As a Public Function. Municipal Recreation. The Great Playgrounds of the Nation. The States and the Counties. Now What?

Though this volume is addressed to youth, I can think of nothing better for discussion groups in clubs, P. T. A.'s and social agencies.

Birthright of Babyhood.

A New York publisher has just brought out a little volume entitled, "The Birthright of Babyhood," by Clarence Wesley Sumner, chief librarian of the Youngstown public library, which gives a full account of the methods and principles involved in the mothers' room of that library, which has attracted so wide attention throughout the nation. And your Uncle Dudley wrote the introduction, the last paragraph of which is:

"I consider 'The Birthright of Babyhood' and the mothers' room of the Youngstown public library the most significant contributions to parent education—if not to education in general—in my memory."

MORE PHONES IN HAWAII.

General business improvement thus far this year has extended to utilities, according to the Honolulu Chamber of Commerce. There was a sharp increase in the number of new telephone stations installed and the number of street car and bus riders.

Everett Strupper Sr. Passes at Son's Home

Heart Attack Is Fatal to Retired Capitalist of Columbus.

George Everett Strupper Sr., 65, father of George Everett Strupper Jr., former famous Tech gridiron star, died shortly before last midnight at the home of his son on West Peach Ferry road.

Mr. Strupper, who was a retired capitalist and prominent citizen of Columbus, was a victim of a heart attack.

He was a native of Columbus, and a life-long resident of that city, where he had been a member of the Tech football team as a player and later as a coach.

Mr. Strupper was an active member of the St. Paul's Methodist church, Columbus, serving as a steward.

Besides his son, who, in his student days, was a member of Georgia Tech football team, he was also a member of the insurance business here. Mr. Strupper is survived by his wife, the former Miss Bessie Hatcher, of Columbus, and a sister, Mrs. Charles Meredith, also of Columbus.

Funeral arrangements will be announced by H. M. Patterson & Son.

TALMADGE FREES CONVICTED KILLER

'Conflicting Evidence' Wins Pardon for Richard Pounds of Augusta.

Ruling evidence was "conflicting," Governor Talmadge yesterday pardoned Richard A. Pounds, 37, of Augusta, a life-term convict.

Pounds was convicted of killing his wife, Hattie Pounds, also known as Hattie Parker, in January, 1934.

"The conflict," the Governor said, "raises a doubt as to guilt."

The pardon was recommended by the trial jury, a deputy sheriff and other officers and a number of other prominent citizens of Richmond county.

"The evidence on which he was convicted was circumstantial and the character of the witnesses who testified against him was hardly worthy of belief."

The Governor said records of Pounds before and during his prison term were good.

The prison commission had declined to recommend clemency.

YOUTH ROBBED OF $28 BY 2 ARMED BANDITS

Two armed bandits last night stole $28.75 in cash and an overcoat valued at $20 from John Johnson, 19, of 714 Cascade avenue, after forcing him into their car at Gordon and Holderness streets and driving him to White and Holderness streets.

Johnson, an usher at a downtown motion picture theater, told police he had collected rents for his father, after leaving work, and was walking on Holderness street when a man called to him from a parked car.

"He asked me for a light and when I gave him a match he drew a pistol and told me to get into the rear of the machine," Johnson said.

POLITICAL PLUMS TINY IN 1910, RECORD SHOWS

TOLEDO, Nov. 13.—(UP)—Citizens who complain that present times are like "the good old days" have some ground for their complaint. The first legal officer in Lucas county, Amos Spafford, charged the government $28.75 for his services for the year 1810.

Spafford was appointed collector of customs by President Madison. The collector was paid $2.50 for personal services. The rest of his payment went for office rent, fuel and stationery.

Atlantans Both Urge and Oppose Single 6-Year Presidential Term

Preston Arkwright and W. Eugene Harrington Present Varied Arguments, Pro and Con, on Proposal to Change U. S. Administrative Tenure.

New agitation in the nation for extending the four-year term of the President of the United States to a term of six years has both its proponents and opponents in Atlanta, as elsewhere. The movement meets with favor from President Preston S. Arkwright, of the Georgia Power Company, and has opposition on the part of W. Eugene Harrington, president of the Atlanta Chamber of Commerce.

The North American Newspaper Alliance, in a recent questionnaire, propounded the proposition to numerous well-known citizens of the nation and in a copyrighted article reported a majority of those questioned in favor of the extended term, which also would provide that, after serving a six-year period, the President could not be a candidate for re-election.

One of the principal arguments advanced in favor of the term extension is contained in Mr. Arkwright's statement and is to the effect that the longer term, without re-election, would tend to remove the office from politics.

One of the principal arguments in favor of retention of the present four-year term is advanced by Mr. Harrington, who declares he believes the people of the nation need the stimulation provided by the elections at frequent intervals.

Favored by Arkwright.

Mr. Arkwright's statement follows: "The idea of electing presidents of the United States for terms of six years, without privilege of re-election, is one that always has appealed to me. The argument commonly advanced in favor of a single six-year term is that it would reduce the number of disturbances to business during election years. Personally, I have never considered that argument of much weight, because good years and bad years seem to come along without much relation to whether they are election years or not."

"There would be, however, in my opinion, a real advantage in a single six-year term in that it would enable presidents to determine and pursue policies without regard to their supposed political effect on election."

"I am not decrying politics. The best public officials are frequently the best politicians, and no important public official can expect to make a success of his administration unless he is at least a good politician. But our problem as citizens is to get the best public service out of our elected officials, and it does not seem to me that that end is achieved by our present system of electing presidents for four years and giving them a second term—if they can get it. During the first term, every president is hopeful of winning a second term and it is perfectly natural that his decisions and policies are influenced, at least in part, by the thought of making votes in the re-election campaign. On the other hand, if he were not eligible for re-election, there is at least a hope that his dominant interest would be constructive achievement for the general welfare, with less pressure upon him from partisan and vote-getting considerations."

"Aside from these things, four years is a mighty short time in which to attempt to carry through any important program or national policy. No business firm would think of hiring a president for four years only. Of course, we cannot elect presidents of the United States for life, but with a longer term than at present and no opportunity for re-election, it would seem that statesmanship might be elevated and partisanship held in its proper place."

Harrington's Statement.

Mr. Harrington said:

"Every four years is not too often for the election of a president. The people need some national excitement to stir them up occasionally, and this opportunity to express their opinion every four years stimulates them."

"I believe that any depressing effect that a forthcoming election might have on business is balanced by the spurts business always takes as soon as the will of the people has been announced. The strong movement of the stock market immediately after President Roosevelt's election last week testifies to that. As I remember it,

RESETTLEMENT WORK LAUDED BY ROOSEVELT

$9,000,000 Community at Greenbelt, Maryland, Inspected by F. D. R.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 13.—(AP)—After inspecting the $9,000,000 community built near here by the Resettlement Administration, President Roosevelt commented today: "This is an experiment that ought to be copied in every community in the United States."

Riding in an open car through the bright, crisp autumn air with Resettlement Administrator, President Roosevelt devoted three hours to the inspection and made half a dozen stops.

"I had seen blueprints but I'm glad to see it first-hand," he told a crowd of workers, newspapermen, officials and others who followed the inspection party over dusty roads. "It exceeded my expectations by far."

The President's remarks were made as he stepped out of his car to see the interior of one of the 1,000 houses being constructed, largely with relief labor, to rent for from $25 to $45 monthly to low income families.

Homes Unoccupied.

None of the homes is occupied yet and probably will not be until sometime next year, resettlement spokesmen said.

Tugwell and other officials explained construction details as the President viewed small farm and garden tracts, the townships with underpasses to separate traffic from sidewalks, the school and community building, a small artificial lake, and a tree and plant nursery.

Resettlement officials had planned to have all of the project's 4,800 employees, mostly from relief lists, at work when Mr. Roosevelt inspected the 3,000-acre tract.

But at each stop a cheer went up and the workmen dropped their tools and pressed around the President's car. He smiled and waved.

The project inspected is at Greenbelt, Md. Officials said ownership eventually would be transferred to a community corporation or agency, subject to state taxes, which will rent or lease to dwellers, storekeepers and other occupants.

Similar projects are underway on the outskirts of Milwaukee and Cincinnati.

F. D. R. in High Spirits.

The President was in high spirits as he motored over the project, in which the townsite is being carved out of a wooded tract.

He was much amused when Administrator Tugwell was recognized by Jack S. Lamm, 9-year-old son of a resettlement official.

"How are you, Rexie?" yelled the boy.

The President watched with obvious interest as several buckets of large bass were tossed into the 27-acre lake by men from the Bureau of Fisheries. The lake will be stocked with several kinds of fish, and swimming, boating and picnics for community residents are part of the plan.

A profusely illustrated pamphlet handed reporters who accompanied the President said resettlement was trying to "put houses and land and people together in such a way that props under our economic and social structure will be permanently strengthened."

It termed "public housing" in this country "almost as backward as China" with "nearly 11 million families, urban and rural, living in tumble-down, unsanitary homes."

Senior Reinstated After Protest; Board Demands Mass Apology.

UNION CITY, Mich., Nov. 13.—(AP)—One hundred and twenty Union City high school students who walked out of their classrooms because a 17-year-old senior was expelled, faced an ultimatum tonight demanding that they return Monday morning and apologize for their actions.

The ultimatum came from the board of education, which reinstated the expelled student. A spokesman for the students said the apologies would not be forthcoming, but C. S. Bartlett, a member of the board, said he believed all would return on the board's terms "except possibly four or five" students.

Edward Mosher, who was expelled, threw an orange that splattered against a classroom wall during the lunch hour. Mosher apologized.

ASTOR CASE VERDICT TO BE KNOWN MONDAY

NEW YORK, Nov. 13.—(AP)—Not until Monday will John Jacob Astor III know the outcome of a $100,000 damage suit tried against him in supreme court today.

The case, involving an automobile collision in Central Park, October 27, 1933, was completed this afternoon but when the jury failed to reach an agreement by midnight a sealed verdict was ordered, returnable Monday morning.

The 24-year-old Astor son testified that responsibility for the accident rested completely on the man who brought the suit, Hyman L. Levy, a real estate operator. Levy claimed injuries to his head caused neurosis and inability to attend to his business.

Astoria testified Levy appeared unharmed after the collision.

"Did you notice the damage to his car?" a lawyer asked.

"I was more concerned with my own car," Astor replied.

He was driving a Rolls Royce.

WILL ROGERS' ESTATE IN DEBT TO CALIFORNIA

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 13.—(AP)—The estate of Will Rogers owes California $28,000 in personal income taxes which the state probably never will collect, Attorney General U. S. Webb said today in an opinion.

Federal taxes of $115,000 due on the estate have priority, Webb said.

Rogers' California estate has been appraised at $106,900. The humorist's large insurance policies are not a part of the estate and are exempt from taxation. His income from syndicate writing was paid directly to his wife, under the terms of his contract.

5-Cent Fare Shoppers' Bus Service Is Proposed for Downtown Sections

The streets committee of city council yesterday approved a request of the Atlanta Coach Company, subsidiary of the Georgia Power Company, for an experimental "shoppers' service" bus line, with 5-cent fare, to operate between shopping centers and other points in the downtown area. The recommendation will go to council Monday.

Other motions designed to eliminate traffic congestion in the downtown area also were approved and likewise will go to council. Included in the list were the rerouting of several car lines and the elimination of the safety island at the northeast corner of Broad and Marietta streets.

Permission to establish the experimental "shoppers' service" run on a trial basis was requested by P. S. Arkwright, president of the Georgia Power Company, in a letter to the mayor and council.

Proposed Route.

The route would be from Peachtree and Ponce de Leon avenue to Washington and Mitchell streets. The route would be on Peachtree to Broad to Mitchell to Washington, thence on Washington to Hunter to Whitehall, returning to Peachtree and Ponce de Leon.

The line, it was pointed out by power company officials, would serve the state capital, city hall, courthouses, theater district, Medical Arts building, Doctors' building and other widely separated points in the business section.

The fare would be 5 cents and no transfers would be issued to other lines. The line would not operate on Sundays and holidays. It would be subject to discontinuance by the power company if not sufficiently patronized.

The route, if approved, will be installed in time for the Christmas shopping. Mr. Arkwright announced.

Safety Island Removal.

Removal of the Broad and Marietta safety island will be requested of the power company if council adopts the recommendation of the streets committee. Under the plan, cars would not stop at that corner, but would continue on to the safety island at Marietta and Forsyth street. Such a system, it was claimed, would do much to eliminate present congestion on Broad and Marietta streets.

The streets committee also recommended that council request the power company to investigate the feasibility of rerouting the North Decatur car line to eliminate congestion on Pryor street. The present route is down Auburn avenue into North Pryor street and thence to Edgewood avenue.

Rerouting of the East Point, College Park and Hapeville car lines to eliminate congestion Alabama street also was suggested. The present route is up Forsyth to Alabama, through Alabama to Broad and out Broad.

Viaduct Replacement.

The streets committee asked that council request the power company to replace the present viaduct over the traction lines operated by the power company at Second and Cottage Grove avenues. Councilman George B. Lyle, who introduced the motion, declared the present bridge is obsolete.

The Fulton county commission will be asked to secure the necessary right-of-way for the extension of Mitchell street from its present terminus at Capitol avenue into Fair street, near Fraser street, if city council adopts a recommendation passed yesterday by the streets committee.

The measure, introduced by Councilman George B. Lyle, is designed to furnish another traffic artery to aid in relieving congestion in downtown Atlanta.

The recommendation is expected to be acted on at the Monday council meeting.

HARTSFIELD COMMENTS ACTIVITIES OF CHEST

Success in the Community Chest campaign will mean much to Atlanta now and in the future, Mayor-Nominee William B. Hartsfield declared yesterday.

Mr. Hartsfield said:

"I am familiar with the work of the Community Chest and its agencies, and know they are meeting a vital community need."

"Community Chest agencies are concerned primarily with direct relief but also with individual and community service that builds a finer citizenship and a better city in which to live."

"I am glad, as times grow better for all of us, and as direct relief needs grow less, that we are better able to do more for those whose need is courage and help in their fights against misfortune and trouble."

"That is the kind of work the agencies of the Chest do. The 34 agencies of the Chest perform a complete community welfare program."

"Success in this campaign will mean much to Atlanta now and in the future."

A collision between any two heavy bodies would produce a vast amount of heat, some of which would reach the earth if the collision took place within the solar system.

Morning Ablutions Urged in 1835
As Dyspepsia, Influenza Remedy

No medicine for the old-timers of 1835 to rid their system of colds, influenza, dyspepsia. It was a cold bath followed with friction of a coarse towel that did the work in those days.

Take it from a moral reformer who listed the remedy of a morning ablution in an original almanac of 1840. The just-after bath and the towel trick was tops as far as health was concerned.

The yellow-paged, age-worn booklet was brought into The Constitution office yesterday by the Rev. J. S. Green, 82 Young street, S. W., who acquired it from relatives in Nashville.

Included in the strained pages were postage rates, calendar listings of the moon and sun, undisputed maxims and much of the same information on a smaller scale that is used today.

Postage rates were recorded at 6 cents for a single letter of one page for not more than 30 miles. Letters to be carried more than 400 miles required a 25-cent rate while newspaper postage needed 1 cent up to 100 miles and 1 1/2 cents for over 100 miles.

But not only health ablutions were listed, for a note of importance to the ladies was included. It read: "A letter from an American lady in England says during her stay of some months she has not yet seen a lady with earrings. And this is the very center of fashion."

An undisputed maxim was the urgent request to "pay for your paper." In great detail the article stressed the necessity of paying the editor so that he could pay the publisher, so that he could pay the printer, so that he could pay the paper maker, and so on for a page.

The little brown, paper covered, 4x8-inch pamphlet contained only some 30 pages, but a wealth of facts was included. Even poems were featured.

BUYER OF OLD GOLD TAKES WOMAN'S TEETH

Because she couldn't help but gaze in admiration at her beautiful gold teeth, Jennie Lewis, negro, of 148 Gilmer street, is without them and police are seeking an old gold buyer.

Jennie placed the teeth on a table to admire their glistening brilliance, she told police. An old gold buyer came by and while she was in another room hunting a gold ring, she said, the buyer grabbed the molars and fled.

GEORGE JAMES HEADS RAILROAD ASSOCIATION

NEW ORLEANS, Nov. 13.—(AP)—George P. James, of Washington, D. C., general passenger agent of the Atlantic Coast Line railroad, was elected president of the American Association of Passenger Traffic Officers, which met here today.

O. P. Bartlett, of Chicago, passenger traffic manager of the Southern Pacific Company, was elected vice president, and W. C. Hope, secretary for the past 25 years, was re-elected.

The 1937 meeting city was left to selection by the executive committee.

PARK TRACT IS NAMED FOR HORACE M. RANTIN

Councilman Horace M. Rantin, chairman of the parks committee of city council, was honored yesterday by the naming of a newly acquired four-and-a-half-acre tract at McDonough avenue and Sutherland drive as H. M. Rantin park.

The councilman served the old twelfth ward, in which the new park is located, several years. The land was acquired in September a year ago.

FRANK TUCKER MASON PASSES AT RESIDENCE

Granite Company President
Succumbs to Short Illness in 57th Year.

Frank Tucker Mason, president of the Pine Mountain Granite Company and a resident of Atlanta since 1906, died yesterday morning at the residence, 1410 Avenue de Leon avenue, at the age of 56, following a short illness.

Mr. Mason, who was associated in business with Alex. Kelley, of Lithonia, and R. W. Underwood, of Atlanta, was a native of Chicago. He was a graduate of Andover preparatory school and Yale University. During his undergraduate days at Yale, he was a member of the varsity football team and the cycling team. He formerly held membership in the Rotary Club and was a prominent member of the North Avenue Presbyterian church.

Surviving are his wife, the former Miss Elizabeth Venable, member of a pioneer Georgia family, and owner, with her brother, Samuel Venable, of Stone Mountain; a daughter, Mrs. Thomas Eldredge; a son, Samuel Venable Mason; two brothers, Fred C. Mason, of Atlanta, and Harry Mason, of New York, and a granddaughter, Miss Leila Elizabeth Eldredge.

Final rites will be held at 2 o'clock this afternoon at the residence, with the Revs. Richard Orme Flinn and Ashby Jones officiating. Burial will be in Oakland cemetery, under direction of Brandon-Bond-Condor.

SPELMAN COLLEGE TO SEE 'THE RIVALS'

Ethel Barrymore Colt To Play Role of 'Lucy' in Production Tonight.

Ethel Barrymore Colt, daughter of the famous actress, Ethel Barrymore, will appear in the role of "Lucy" at the performance of Sheridan's noted play, "The Rivals," to be presented at 8 o'clock tonight by the Jitney Players in Howe Memorial hall of Spelman College.

Miss Colt, who is the fifth generation of the famous acting family in this country, made her stage debut with her mother several years ago in a dramatization of Julia Peterkin's Pulitzer prize-winning novel of negro life, "Scarlet Sister Mary." She has also had experience in musical comedy, vaudeville, radio and stock.

Many of the costumes used by the Jitney Players have been gifts to the company from Miss Barrymore.

Besides Miss Colt, the cast includes Douglas Rowland, Alice Cheney, John de Angeli, Marjorie Jarecki, Robert Adams, Homer Hull, Pendleton Harrison, Thomas Conley and Jack Harrison.

TECH TO ACCEPT PORTRAIT OF HALL

Ceremony To Be Part of Home-Coming Exercises at School.

Dr. M. K. Brittain, president of Tech, will accept in behalf of the school, a portrait of Dr. Lyman Hall at the home-coming luncheon at 12:30 o'clock today on the campus.

The portrait of Dr. Hall, Tech's second president, was painted by Mrs. Harold Brush-Brown, nationally known artist and wife of the head of the department of architecture at Tech. Expense for the painting was assumed by graduates of Tech in June, 1936.

The presentation is to feature the home-coming luncheon, at which the class of 1888, the first to graduate under Dr. Hall, will be one of the several classes holding reunions this week end.

HITCH-HIKING HUNTER KILLS ONE, SHOTS ONE

TUPPER LAKE, N. Y., Nov. 13. (AP)—A bullet from the rifle of a hitch-hiking hunter fatally injured one CCC member today, passing through his body and wounding a second. The rifle was discharged accidentally when the hunter was boarding a conservation department truck returning from Benson mines. The victim was Andrew Blanton, 23, of Union, S. C. The injured youth was Randolph McCall, of Easley, S. C.

The hunter was Eugene Stigler, of Danville, who, with an unidentified companion, hailed the truck for a ride, CCC youths said, and in a hurry to board the truck and removed only four bullets from the rifle and as he climbed over the side the weapon was discharged.

PLEASANT WEEK END IS PROMISED ATLANTA

Fair weather for Atlanta's week-end is the hopeful news from the weather man.

No rain is in sight, but, as he always warns at this time of the year, it is a changeable season.

His last peep at the weather chart late yesterday bore the promise of clear skies, with temperatures for today ranging from 45 degrees this morning to 60 degrees this afternoon. Yesterday the range was between 44 and 63 degrees.

'Job Racketeer's' Error Brings Gang Sentence

A "job racketeer" who attempted to pull the same trick twice with the same person got an eight-month chain gang sentence yesterday in Fulton criminal court.

Jim Grimes, 16-year-old negro boy, testified that last January Robert Reese, 30-year-old negro, approached him on the street to ask for a match. When Grimes said he had none, Reese asked if he had a job. Told yes, Reese asked if Grimes would like a better one. That, too, brought an affirmative answer.

"If you will put up $1.50 for a uniform I can get you a job paying you more, beginning tomorrow," Grimes quoted Reese as saying. The youth produced the $1.50 and Reese vanished with it, he said.

A few days ago the same man approached Grimes with the same questions and proposition. Grimes told him to "ride with me on my bicycle to get the $1.50." Reese mounted the wheel and Grimes rode him to the police station, where charges of simple larceny were preferred against Reese. Judge Jesse M. Wood yesterday found Reese guilty and sentenced him.

Many Social Security Questions Are Sent to Washington Bureau

The Atlanta Constitution's Washington Information Bureau, consisting of hundreds of trained research workers who have at their fingertips all government documents and rulings, is busily engaged at the present answering queries on the social security act for The Constitution's readers.

If you have some question or some point you do not understand concerning the new law, write the Social Security Editor, The Atlanta Constitution, and your question will be returned to you with the answer.

Watch for the ruling on Atlanta waterworks inquiry that will be given as soon as an answer can be obtained from Washington.

Puzzling Question. The question is: "The Atlanta Waterworks Department employs pay income and other taxes from which other city employees are exempt, inasmuch as this is rated as a profit-making organization. Do these employees come under the social security benefit? Is the organization liable for its part in this benefit?" The answer will be printed in The Constitution tomorrow. And if you have a question concerning the act write for the free service today. Enclose a self-addressed, stamped envelope and your answer will be mailed to you from Washington. If of sufficient importance to readers in general, the answer, with the question, will be printed in The Constitution with only your initials used.

Some Answers. Some questions and answers received follow:

Q. I have been in this country for 25 years, but have never been naturalized. Will I be entitled to old-age insurance under the federal law? A. No, only on the first $3,000 paid for employment in any calendar year. Your contributions would be paid for 10 months each year, or until contributions have been paid on $3,000.

Q. I will be 65 years old in 1943, but I am not working regularly, only about three months in each year. Will I get old-age benefits? E. M. J.

A. If you have received not less than $2,000 in total wages in a non-exempted employment between December 31, 1936, and before you reach the age of 65 years, and if wages have been paid to you on some day in each of five years after December 31, 1936, and before 65, then you will receive benefits beginning at age 65.

Q. How will the amount of benefits paid to an employee under the old-age pension provision of the federal law be determined? If I earn $2,000 a year for 30 years how much monthly benefits will I receive? X. Y. Z.

A. You will receive $36.25 a month after age 65. This is calculated as follows: Take the total earnings for 30 years at $2,000, which equals $60,000. On the first $3,000 of that you will receive one-half of 1%, or $15; on the next $42,000 you will receive one-twelfth of 1%, or $35, and on the remaining $15,000 you will receive one-twenty-fourth of 1%, or $6.25. The sum of $15 plus $35 plus $6.25 equals $56.25, which is your monthly benefit as long as you live.

Up to $3,000. Q. I make $3,600 a year. Do I pay the contributions to the old-age pension fund on all that salary? Executive.

A. No, only on the first $3,000 paid for employment in any calendar year. Your contributions would be paid for 10 months each year, or until contributions have been paid on $3,000.

Up to $3,000. Q. I make $3,600 a year. Do I pay the contributions to the old-age pension fund on all that salary? Executive.

A. No, only on the first $3,000 paid for employment in any calendar year. Your contributions would be paid for 10 months each year, or until contributions have been paid on $3,000.

Q. I will be 65 years old in 1943, but I am not working regularly, only about three months in each year. Will I get old-age benefits? E. M. J.

A. If you have received not less than $2,000 in total wages in a non-exempted employment between December 31, 1936, and before you reach the age of 65 years, and if wages have been paid to you on some day in each of five years after December 31, 1936, and before 65, then you will receive benefits beginning at age 65.

Q. How will the amount of benefits paid to an employee under the old-age pension provision of the federal law be determined? If I earn $2,000 a year for 30 years how much monthly benefits will I receive? X. Y. Z.

A. You will receive $36.25 a month after age 65. This is calculated as follows: Take the total earnings for 30 years at $2,000, which equals $60,000. On the first $3,000 of that you will receive one-half of 1%, or $15; on the next $42,000 you will receive one-twelfth of 1%, or $35, and on the remaining $15,000 you will receive one-twenty-fourth of 1%, or $6.25. The sum of $15 plus $35 plus $6.25 equals $56.25, which is your monthly benefit as long as you live.

Up to $3,000. Q. I make $3,600 a year. Do I pay the contributions to the old-age pension fund on all that salary? Executive.

A. No, only on the first $3,000 paid for employment in any calendar year. Your contributions would be paid for 10 months each year, or until contributions have been paid on $3,000.

JUDGE HOWARD SEEKS $3,166 IN BACK SALARY

Recent Supreme Court Ruling Cited as Pay Cut Is Challenged.

Mandamus action to force payment of back salaries to Fulton superior court judges was filed yesterday with the filing of a formal demand for $3,166 in back pay by Judge G. H. Howard.

Judges were cut by the county commission from $12,000 to $8,000 in 1931, and Judge Howard yesterday demanded of Mrs. Mary Abbott MacNeil, county treasurer, the difference for the year of 1931 and part of 1932.

His action, the first in Fulton county, was said to have been based on a recent supreme court decision that a county, having exercised its right to increase the salaries of judges, cannot reduce the amount during the term to which the judges were elected.

Should Fulton be forced to pay back salaries to the superior court judges under this decision, it would cost at least $33,830 it was said.

Judge Howard's formal demand paved the way for court action should the county commission refuse to instruct the treasurer to meet his request. The commission probably will take up the matter at a special meeting, but members of the commission already have declared they would not pay the back salaries unless ordered to do so by court.

It was revealed yesterday that a number of superior court bailiffs also are considering asking payment of the differences in their salaries during the same depression years.

Judge Howard would not comment on his demand and referred questions to his attorneys, James A. Branch and Marion Smith.

It was expected that if the commission refuses to accede to Judge Howard's request, the mandamus action to force payment will be presented to a superior court judge in another county. Judge John D. Humphries, Judge E. E. Doney, Judge E. D. Thomas and Judge Virlyn B. Moore are not qualified to pass on the matter, since all are financially interested in the result. Judge Hugh M. Dorey, who was appointed to the superior court after the reduction in salary to the superior court judges, had not disqualify himself yesterday, it was said.

Judge Dorey's salary reduction does not come under the same situation with the other judges.

2 MUNICIPALITIES PLAN ELECTIONS

College Park, Hapeville Look Forward to Races for Council.

Hapeville will elect three councilmen on December 1 and College Park will name a mayor and three councilmen on December 7.

Roscoe Mullins, L. A. Norton and Forrest Garrard, whose terms as councilmen at Hapeville expire December 31, are up for reelection for the three offices. Five others have qualified in the race. They are Harold H. Sims, A. Hilsman, A. T. Cook, J. D. Kemp and B. J. Dancy. Closing entry date is 5 o'clock tomorrow and closing registration day is Friday.

Mayor E. D. Barrett is candidate for reelection as mayor of College Park and will be opposed by George W. Harris, W. F. Sidon, councilman of the first ward, is up for reelection against H. H. Loney. Fred Shaffer seeks reelection unopposed from the second ward and C. W. Findley and J. G. O'Neal, both new candidates, seek the vacant post in the third ward. Entry date closes November 23 and final registration is set November 27.

14-YEAR-OLD BOY GIVEN LONG TERM

Negro Boy Sentenced to Twenty Years for Killing of White Youth.

Charles Mills, 14-year-old negro boy, was convicted of the murder of Wayne Dennard, 15, white, yesterday in Fulton superior court and was sentenced to serve 20 years imprisonment.

The jury returned its verdict with the maximum penalty for voluntary manslaughter after Assistant Solicitor E. E. Andrews demanded the electric chair for Mills.

Defense Attorney William Schley Howard filed a motion for a new trial immediately. Mills was found guilty of killing Dennard in a Capitol avenue grocery store July 25, 1936, with a knife.

On the Air Today
By SAMUEL E. CLARKE.

The musical story conceived by the composer was recaptured by Leopold Stokowski in the superb rendition of the impressive "Entrance of the Gods into Valhalla" from Richard Wagner's opera, "Das Rheingold," offered by the eminent conductor at the helm of the Philadelphia Symphony orchestra on the Citizens & Southern National Bank's new program heard over WGST at 9 o'clock last night.

This writer has always been partial to the distinctive music of Stokowski, and the interpretation of musical compositions by the Philadelphia Symphony under his guidance only proves this musical individualism.

Stokowski has recently returned from Hollywood, where he completed his first picture. He has directed the destinies of the Philadelphia orchestra since 1912, and in that time developed the organization into one of the most brilliant and remarkable orchestras in the world. Eugene Ormandy, assistant conductor, before assuming his post in Philadelphia, was conductor of the Minneapolis Symphony.

During the "Business Forum of the Air" part of this program, Walter B. Phipps, author and psychologist, and William M. Kiplinger, Washington publisher, discuss business conditions.

Pitkin was born in Ypsilanti, Mich., the son of a town newspaper editor. He studied at the universities of Berlin and Munich and returned to teach psychology and philosophy at Columbia University, where he has been a member of the faculty since 1905. Dr. Pitkin is the author of more than 20 books, including the recent "Life Begins at Forty" and "More Power to You."

William M. Kiplinger was born in Bellefontaine, Ohio, and for 15 years has been editor and publisher of the Kiplinger Washington Letters, devoted to authoritative interpretation and comment on the relations between Washington and business.

This new series of programs sponsored by a group of 40 important American banking institutions, of which the Citizens & Southern National Bank is a member, gives a non-partisan and dependable picture of what is happening, and what is likely to happen, in Washington and interprets the probable effect upon business. It will enlighten the public on the broad general aspects of private ownership and depicts the principles of the American industrial system and what they mean in the average family's standard of living.

The musical features coupled with the brief messages of the Business Forum round out a program that is both cultural and informative, and should be of unusual interest to Americans in all walks of life.

3 MORE PERSONS DIE OF AUTO CRASH HURTS

Several Others Injured in Series of Traffic Accidents.

Three persons were killed and several others were injured in a series of traffic accidents which swept over the city yesterday.

The dead: Mrs. Irene Waters, 60, of 766 Piedmont avenue.

Jack Wright, negro, of a Frazier street address.

Deaths of the three brought the traffic toll to 72 in the city limits of Atlanta since the first of the year.

Mrs. Waters was struck, according to police, by an automobile driven on Moreland avenue by J. A. Heard, of Covington, Ga. The accident occurred in front of 312 Moreland avenue. Witnesses informed police she had just alighted from her machine and walked directly into the path of Heard's car.

No charges were placed against Heard. Mrs. Waters was taken to Grady hospital, where her injuries were diagnosed as a fracture of the skull, lacerations and bruises. She died at 8:30 o'clock.

Leon Turner, of Covington, an occupant of Heard's machine, was cut by flying glass. He was treated at Grady hospital and dismissed.

Wright, a pedestrian, was fatally injured earlier in the day when a car driven, police reported, by Paul Hambrick, of 971 Martin street, collided with a truck driven by L. H. Hober, of 501 Frazier street. Hambrick's car mounted the curb and struck Wright and Bob Harvey, negro, of 524 Frazier street. Wright died on the way to Grady hospital. Harvey was not seriously hurt. Both drivers were charged with reckless driving.

The other fatal accident occurred at Davis and Mitchell streets when Allen, according to witnesses, stepped from behind a trolley car into the path of a machine driven by Robert Thomas, negro. Allen died almost immediately. Thomas was charged with reckless driving.

Miss Catherine Herren, 22, of Smyrna, was cut and bruised about the face and head when she was thrown against the windshield of an automobile in which she was riding with B. D. Bolling, also of Smyrna.

Police reported Bolling drove his car into the rear of a truck on Marietta street, near the Federal Reserve bank. Miss Herren was treated at Grady hospital and dismissed.

Mrs. J. R. Burton, of Columbus, Ga., was seriously injured when an automobile in which she was riding with Mrs. M. K. Pentecost, of 1648 Pelham road, collided at Butler and Cain streets last night with a machine driven by M. Y. Fallain, 23, of 584 Glen Iris drive.

Mrs. Burton was taken to Grady hospital, where her injuries were diagnosed as a possible fracture of the skull and lacerations and bruises. Both drivers were charged with reckless driving.

Lucius Thomas, negro, of 157 Glenwood avenue, was struck at Fair and Frazier streets by a truck driven, according to police, by H. E. Newman, 45, of 307 Pulliam street. Witnesses informed police Thomas ran out of the path of one car into the path of the truck. Thomas was quoted as saying Newman of blame. No charges were filed. The injured man was admitted to Grady hospital, where his condition was listed as fair.

D. W. Moon, 54, of 28 Fair street, S. W., was struck at Fair and Central avenue by a car driven, police said, by J. C. Lynch, 27, of 166 Flora avenue. Moon suffered a fracture of the left arm. He was treated at Grady hospital. No charge was made against Lynch.

RITTENBAUM RITES SET FOR TOMORROW
Rabbi Harry Epstein and Cantor M. Landman To Officiate.

Final rites for Henry Rittenbaum, 65, well-known member of Atlanta's Jewish community and long-time resident of this city, will be held at 3 o'clock tomorrow afternoon at the chapel of Sam R. Greenberg.

Rabbi Harry Epstein and Cantor M. Landman will officiate and burial will be in Greenwood cemetery.

Mr. Rittenbaum, who was a member of the firm of Rittenbaum Brothers, died Thursday of a heart attack at his residence, 490 North avenue, northeast.

Members of the family said an accident at the Atlanta Overall Company, 474 Decatur street, in which escaping fumes from a chlorine tank resulted in hospital treatment for several negro employees, was a "possible" contributing factor to his death. Members of the family said he had suffered from a weak heart for several years.

ISLAND DOT IN PACIFIC BOUGHT BY 2 NATIONS

Christmas Isle Becomes International Prize for Airway Base.

By HENRY WOOD.
United Press Staff Correspondent.
SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 13.—(UP)—Christmas Island is the next tiny island most calculated to leap suddenly out of the almost boundless reaches of the Pacific and assume an international importance in the public eye, according to information reaching San Francisco from such faraway sources as the Papete of Tahiti and from informal conversation in governmental and naval circles here.

Following the colonization of the Baker, Jarvis and Howland islands by the United States as plane bases in a proposed line to New Zealand, Christmas Island, it is declared, is the next of the Pacific atolls that is calculated to become suddenly important.

The American Museum of Natural History in New York has sent an expedition to the island to make a close investigation so a reproduction of the tiny bit of land may be placed in its museum. The results of the expedition may focus attention of both the government and the public on the island.

New Zealand Watchful.
Two New Zealand cruisers have been reported in shipping circles to be looking over the island, presumably from the standpoint of British interests.

For more than a century possession of the island has been disputed by the United States and Great Britain. The exact international status of the island remains somewhat complicated. As late as November 28, 1919, the British government proclaimed its sovereignty, although it is understood the State Department never recognized this move.

In the meantime the island is operated by a Frenchman under lease from the British government, but who has had strong support from various French governments in the past.

The population consists of about 25 Tahitians brought there from Papete by the Frenchman to cultivate his coconut plantations.

Island's History Long.
Unlike Jarvis, Howland and Baker islands, which were colonized by the United States, Christmas Island has back of it a history of romance and mystery. It was discovered by Captain Cook on Christmas Day, 1777, the year following his discovery of the Hawaiian islands. Hence its name.

Since then it has been claimed alternately by Britain and the United States. It lies just south of the Hawaiian Islands, just north of the equator and about opposite the Panama canal. Among its interesting assets is the "Bay of Wrecks," where the jetsam of enough wrecks accumulate to furnish the limited population with all the material necessary for building. There also is a gasoline supply left for the late Charles T. P. Cline, trans-Pacific flyer, who had hoped to cross the Pacific with Christmas Island as an intermediate stop.

Colonized by French.
But the real romance of Christmas Island began shortly after 1880, when Father Rougier, a French priest, conceived the idea of planting it entirely in coconut trees at that time when coconut oil had a high value. He leased it for 87 years from the British government. He gave French names to about every spot on the island, from Paris for one point to Marshall for his schooner.

When he died, the lease passed to his nephew and godson, Paul Emmanuel Rougier. At the meantime, the price of coconut oil had decreased, but Rougier with his 25 Tahitians still held possession. Now he finds growing coconuts more profitable than growing coconuts.

Australian Industry Back to Boom Times
Premier of New South Wales Reports Commonwealth Budget Has Surplus.

CANBERRA, Nov. 13.—(UP)—Not only is Australia entirely out of the depression, but every economic, industrial and financial situation is just about the antithesis of what it is in those countries where the depression still exists.

Such are the declarations of the Honorable R. S. B. Stevens, premier of New South Wales, who has played an important role in getting Australia back to normal. Before entering politics, Stevens was an accountant and now is an acknowledged authority on government, business and finance.

What being out of the depression means, Stevens explains as follows: The aggregate budget of the Australian commonwealth government and the six state governments show for the current fiscal year a surplus of $4,500,000.

Remission of federal taxes have been assured to the extent of $20,000,000 annually.

Wages Good; No Idle.
There is full employment of the working population at standard rates and wages.

All trades and industries are increasing their profits while public concerns the past year earned an average of 7.3 per cent on capital investment.

There is an ever-increasing private investment in industry, housing and building.

Justice Brandeis Marks His 80th Birthday

Congratulations are in order for Justice Louis Brandeis, for 20 years a member of the United States supreme court. The justice celebrates his 80th birthday November 13. Brandeis was born in Louisville, Ky., in 1856 and was admitted to the bar in St. Louis in 1878. He was appointed to the supreme bench in January, 1916, by President Wilson, and assumed office in June of that year. Justice Brandeis is considered the leading liberal on the supreme court bench. ## Speedier Traffic To Remove Need For Skyscrapers, Architect Says

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Nov. 13.—(UP)—If traffic can be speeded up, there will be no further need for skyscrapers, according to Sir Raymond Unwin, former chief architect to the British health ministry.

Speaking at Massachusetts Institute of Technology School of Architecture, Sir Raymond pointed out that there was no necessity for over-crowding of cities. Kansas with 10 houses to the acre could accommodate the entire population of the earth, he said.

There is very seldom any reason for traffic facilities can be speeded up. "Naturally, in planning a city, one has to make the best use of the terrain at one's disposal, but in this modern day of traffic facilities, one can speed up the area of the town or city design, and need not really make very much difference."

The British expert stressed importance of a rebuilding plan for all cities "new or old."

"Then all the new projects undertaken in that city could be made to fit into the conceived plan," Sir Raymond said.

"Eventually as section after section of the city is rehabilitated, the original formulated scheme would be completed."

The present system of slum clearance and rehousing is shortsighted, according to Sir Raymond.

"Haphazard projects around the outskirts of the present day large city are leading nowhere," he said. "Merely because unknown factors are sure to develop as a result of science and discovery is no excuse for not planning at all."

Although Boston streets were made by following cow paths, some cities "are not planned on any such efficient lines as this," he said.

ed guests as to the most tactful and refined manner in public society of how "to clear the mouth." It presumably was left to the individual sense of wisdom, but numerous guests seemed to find that the best method was to swallow it.

However, to encourage the sharpness of the taster's sensitive palate, crackers and cheese were available to all guests.

Then a few other of the social graces of a "wine tasting" were fully conveyed to guests. One of these was that they were not expected to smoke. "Smoking," it was intimated, dulls the sensitivity of the palate. Ice water also was taboo for the same reason.

To create an appropriate atmosphere for the taster's guests, the reception room was transformed for the occasion into miniature vineyard scenes. Even thousands of grapes were hanging from vines, as well as aged wine casks and a wine press were brought from the vineyards.

VATICAN POPULATION SET AT 600 PERSONS
VATICAN CITY, Nov. 13.—(UP)—Official statistics released by the Vatican reveal that the pontifical state is the world record holder for the number of motor vehicles per capita.

The tiny state has 176 vehicles—145 are automobiles, 21 trucks and 10 motorcycles. The official population of Vatican City is 600.

The city has four filling stations where only Vatican motor cars can refuel. The price of gasoline is much lower than in Italy.

RETRIBUTION STRIKES 4 GUILTY OF PERJURY
URENA, Bihar, Nov. 13.—(UP)—Swift retribution which overcame four witnesses who were found to have committed perjury in a murder trial here led the people of a district to celebrate the occasion with prolonged feasting.

After they had given false testimony in court, two of the witnesses lost their sons, another was bitten by a snake and died a few hours later, and the fourth later was chased by a snake and narrowly escaped death.

JAPANESE POPULATION NEARING PEAK NUMBER

New Tendency Is To Limit Family, Peace Survey Shows.

By HENRY WOOD.
United Press Staff Correspondent.
SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 13.—(UP)—Japan's "ever increasing population" no longer needs to be a problem for Japan or a worry for other nations in which Japan reportedly has been seeking population outlets, says Professor Carl L. Alsberg, chairman of the international research committee of the Institute of Pacific Relations.

Dr. Alsberg, who also is director of the Food Research Institute of Stanford University, declares that the research work of the institute has demonstrated that within the next 40 or 50 years, Japan's increase in population will have ceased and will have become stabilized.

The only point on which authorities are not unanimous, he says, is the final figure which may be regarded as the maximum for the Japanese race. Some think this maximum may reach as high as 100,000,000 which others think it will ever go much beyond 80,000,000.

Families Already Restricted.
Already, according to Dr. Alsberg, Japan has begun to show the western tendency of a decreasing population. This trend is based on the same factors found in western countries, the first is that of economical insecurity which has the effect of causing married couples to restrict their families as much as possible and the second is the ever increasing knowledge relative to birth control.

The method on which the research work of the Institute of Pacific Relations is based, Dr. Alsberg explains, is that which is employed in all similar cases. There is taken as a basis the number of women in Japan between 15 and 45 and the future birth rate is based largely on that figure.

Two Children Favored.
Already the tendency is manifest in Japan to limit families to two children, where in France the present tendency is to restrict to one child, preferably a son. Research workers of the institute believe that it is even possible that Japan itself eventually may accept this French standard as the ideal basis for the size of a family.

However, even with the present restrictions that are taking place in Japan and with the present number of potential mothers between 15 and 45 years old, Japan, it is asserted, will experience a steady decline or rather stabilization of its population by about 1990.

That the Japanese themselves are not unaware of this tendency, is established by the fact, Dr. Alsberg declares, that Japanese experts like Teijiro Uyeda, professor of economics of the University of Commerce, and one of the world authorities on population, has made the fact that population problems in Japan, which was published in 1932.

Vast Increase Doubtful.
As a result of this stabilization of the Japanese population at a figure of about 80,000,000, it is asserted, its present population, officials of the Institute of Pacific Relations point out that this no longer constitutes either a serious problem for Japan or a serious problem for other countries in the Pacific area which felt that they might be regarded by Japan as a potential outlet for the latter's excess population.

By similar investigations in the past few years the institute hopes to be able to eliminate other Pacific area problems that at present are looked upon as possible sources of international disagreement.

SERGEANT HAS SWORD USED IN 1776, 1861
FORT SNEILING, Minn., Nov. 13.—(UP)—A sword used in the Revolutionary and Civil Wars is the property of the Fort Snelling, Minn., National Historic Site. The sword was used by Master Sergeant Caldwell Jones, of Fort Snelling. Despite having backed its way through British and Indian ranks during the Revolutionary War, and having been in vigorous use during the Creek Indian uprising in the time of Andrew Jackson, the blade is in good condition.

It was presented to Major Caldwell Jones, by General Lafayette, the French patriot.

FLORIDIAN GOES AFOOT TO SEE AMERICA FIRST
HONOLULU, Nov. 13.—(UP)—Arthur Napulen Lemieux of Tampa, Fla., is touring the Hawaiian islands, on foot in an effort to "see America first" and see it under his own locomotion.

He declares he has been walking ever since he was 7, and since then has covered virtually every state in the Union.

When speaking of radio, the French refer to it as the T. S. F. This stands for "telegraphic sans fil," which means telegraphy without wire.

Internal heat of the earth is the ultimate cause of volcanoes erupting.

Four Are Killed, 3 Injured in Head-on Train Wreck

Four trainmen were killed and three others injured in the head-on collision of these two trains operated by the Louisiana and Arkansas railroad at Grant, La. Here are the two locomotives locked together after the impact had telescoped them. Railroad officials said there was no connection between the accident and labor trouble in which the road has been embroiled for two months. Associated Press photo.

Curious 'Ice Bugs' Thrive at Zero But Perish When Mercury Mounts

BOZEMAN, Mont., Nov. 13.—(UP)—Professor G. Allen Mail, entomologist at Montana State College, is mourning the death of another of his recently acquired collection of extremely rare and cannibalistic "ice bugs," which he keeps in an ammonia refrigerator room here.

Known scientifically as Gryllolabia, the "ice bugs" were discovered in the Gallatin valley near here by Fred Skoog, a senior entomology student. Faculty expeditions subsequently found more of the insects. Several of them have died, possibly because of some parasitic insect they devoured or because of unfavorable experimental temperatures to which they were subjected.

Today 68 of the Gryllolabia, or "ice bugs," are kept in a test temperature of 10 below zero. Mail said that was "a bit too chilly" for them. They thrive at readings of about zero and quickly perish if the mercury mounts much above that, since they are found only in high altitudes, frequently in glaciers.

Hoping to perpetuate his scientific collection, Mail planned to start mating experiments soon. During this time the males and females will be placed in the same tin boxes. Six months is required for the eggs to develop.

The "ice bugs," experiments have indicated, will not withstand light, so that attempts to photograph them have been only partly successful. The moment the lid is raised on their tin boxes they scurry to the protection of a spring.

The insects feed on house flies and other insects. They will not eat living insects, except each other, unless famished. Some of them, it was observed, relish cake and bread crumbs. A thumbnail sketch of the Gryllolabia is shown.

Adults are about one inch long, bright yellow, with six legs and have long feelers on each side of the head about an eighth of an inch thick. They are wingless and non-poisonous. The life-span is not known.

Their scientific importance, which Mail doubts is fully known, is in the study of the derivation of insect forms. The Gryllolabia, first was found by Professor E. M. Walker, of Toronto University, in Banff, Alberta, in 1906, have undergone no evolutionary changes in structure since dinosaurs and other animals now extinct roamed the earth.

SWEDES FIND HOUSING EASY IN CO-OPERATIVES
Government, Local Groups Work Closely, Professor's Survey Shows.

Editor's Note: After an extensive tour of Europe, during which he studied development of housing programs, Dr. Ernest M. Fisher, director of economics and statistics of the United States Housing Administration, has written his conclusions in the following dispatch.

By ERNEST M. FISHER.
Written for United Press.
WASHINGTON, Nov. 13.—(UP)—Co-operation in housing is widespread in Europe and has come to its highest development in Scandinavian countries. Co-operative societies in Stockholm are credited with having built 29,339 dwelling units since 1916.

Through decades of experience which reaches back as far as 1870 the co-operative housing societies have developed an experience which is valuable not only from the point of view of their housing operation but also from the point of view of the organization of co-operative effort.

The rapid progress of co-operation in Stockholm and other Swedish cities is largely due to the close relationship which is maintained between the governmental agencies and the co-operative societies. The municipality of Stockholm appoints one member of the board of directors of the co-operative society.

Parent Society Exists.
The HSB, as one of the leading co-operative societies in Stockholm is known, acts as a parent society for the small local co-operative groups which wish to benefit from the co-operation. In a typical case the HSB prepares plans, obtains contracts, supervises construction, procures temporary housing for the families while the permanent housing is being built, and the city frequently gives concessions by way of low ground rents to the HSB.

When the property has been completed and is ready for occupancy with the permanent financing arranged, the HSB sells the property to the group of co-operators who then assume responsibility for determining management policies.

On taking over responsibility for the property, members of the local group subscribe to stock in their own society in an amount which represents the equity of the HSB in the property, plus 5 per cent. This extra sum is a contribution to the HSB designed to increase its operating funds and thus expand its operations.

Down Payment Small.
Small cash down payments are required for the co-operating members of the group. The equity is paid in installments, the first being given by the members of the local group. These notes are in turn transferred to the HSB, the parent society, as security for its advance to cover the equity in the property.

Through this device of co-operation the cost of occupancy in the property is reduced considerably below the current rentals in comparable properties, and the investment is made on a commercial basis. The attempt is not made, of course, to supply houses at the lowest possible rentals but at rentals which represent a fair return on the investment and which will stimulate rather than stifle competition of private initiative.

The contribution of co-operation in Stockholm consists not alone in the reduction of rents in co-operative houses and throughout the competitive rental market, but also in developing higher housing standards throughout the whole market.

Co-operation also is common in Denmark, Germany and Switzerland. There is some co-operation in France, England, however, has not advanced far as yet.

WOOD TO GIVE EXTRACT OF FOOD IN WAR CRISIS

Nobel Prize Winner Says Germany Has Evolved New Process.

DETROIT, Nov. 13.—(UP)—Germany is prepared to chop branches off trees and convert them into food should another war suddenly cut off all supplies, declares Dr. Friedrich Bergius, member of the Heidelberg University faculty and Nobel Prize winner in 1932 for scientific endeavor.

The scientist immediately corrected the impression that such a war-time menu might contain sawdust sandwiches and tankard salads. But he said it was an accomplished fact that German ingenuity had developed food from wood.

In Use Three Years.
"For the past three years Germany has been producing and using tons of sugar as a by-product from cellulose in sawmill and forest wastes," Bergius said.

Some of the extracts extracted directly from wood, he said, include everything from chocolate cream fillings to yeast and food for cattle. The extraction process also has produced alcohol, lactic acid, charcoal and a special type of acid-resisting board. In addition, a large number of industrial chemicals have been derived from wood, regardless of kind, making it 100 per cent useful.

Dr. Bergius said that with sugar alone, derived from wood, Germany is possessed with the chief elements of food, because through biological change his countrymen have produced fats by feeding the sugar to pigs. Proteins come from a combination of the yeast and a synthetic ammonia.

All Problems Not Solved.
"There still is a big problem," he continued, "in production of food from wood on a large scale. We can do it in our laboratories but that's far from commercial production."

How did the Germans arrive at their new food source? Dr. Bergius, who won the Nobel prize in 1932 for his hydrogenation of coal, explained: "Only about half of a tree is used for lumber. German scientists decided to do something about the remaining 50 per cent, which either was burned or left in the forests. Chemical research evolved sugar from cellulose and supplied us with a basis for our theory."

Acid Mixture Used.
"Briefly, the waste wood is pounded into small splinters and all moisture removed. Then it is mixed with hydrochloric acid and sent through a series of batteries yielding sugar concentrations. The acid then is distilled off and the sugar retained."

After the wood splinters have outgrown their usefulness in this process, he said, they are pressed into bricks to make a hot, long-burning fuel. The same bricks, treated properly, can be utilized for floors, walls or insulation purposes.

Samples of the sugar carried by Dr. Bergius approximated confectioner's sugar. It was, he said, about half as sweet as cane sugar.

The United States Bureau of Standards says that white paint will give the lightest room and light tints will give more light than dark tints or solid colors.

"Scouting a Rumor" Barred as "Outrage"

This skit, entitled "Scouting a Rumor," was withdrawn from the musical revue "New Faces" in Philadelphia after Mayor S. Davis Wilson termed it "a damnable outrage" for "ridiculing the wife of the President of the United States." The actress on the left depicts Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, that on the right represents Mrs. Herbert Hoover and in the center is the burlesque conception of a Girl Scout. Associated Press photo.

MONTE CARLO OF EAST ERASED BY CREDITORS

Ritz Casino, of Shanghai, in Ruins, Goes on Auction Block.

SHANGHAI, Nov. 13.—(UP)—The old Ritz casino, once one of the most pretentious and luxurious gambling establishments in the far east, is scheduled to fall under the auctioneer's hammer here.

Although the title deed to the property is French, the Ritz is owned by Carlos Garcia, for years the roulette and baccarat king of the orient. When the Ritz opened for business in 1922 it was considered the swankiest spot east of Suez. Garcia spent a fortune on the elaborate casino, took a fortune or two out of it, but gave another fortune in champagne and good food.

Guests at the Ritz were never bothered with champagne or dinner bills. Liquors and food were free, and each customer was urged to consume as much as he could. Garcia always said that a man who lost his bankroll at the Ritz was entitled to a ride for his money, and he never failed to send his customers home in taxis.

Business on Grand Scale.
A night at the Ritz was much the same as a night at Monte Carlo. The business was on the same grand scale with thousands of dollars passing over the tables every evening. Decorations were lavish and the music exceptionally good.

Although the Ritz required a fortune to operate, Garcia became a millionaire. When the Ritz was closed by Chinese authorities in 1926, Garcia worried little. His customers followed him to the International Settlement where his famous 151C blossomed and flourished.

The beginning of the end came in 1929—not because of the depression but because of a new treaty between the United States and China which abolished Mexico's extraterritorial rights.

Being a Mexican citizen, although of Chinese extraction, Garcia's gambling empire crumbled at his feet overnight.

Barbed Wire Strung.
In a night raid the Chinese police closed one after another of his establishments, which had become numerous. Barbed wire entanglements were placed around 151-C to prevent the escape of prominent guests, and newspaper photographers enjoyed a field day snapping his society folk en route to the black market.

Garcia's wealth, which he had had in a vain attempt to fight the Chinese in the courts. After a year in the Amoy Road jail, he left Shanghai a comparatively poor man.

Although the old Ritz remained as one of Garcia's few possessions, he had borrowed $20,000 against it. Today, with interest, his account is in arrears more than $100,000, and to satisfy the claim the Ritz property is to be auctioned.

Since the Sino-Japanese trouble in 1929 when Japanese shells blew the swanky millionaire's rendezvous to pieces, the Ritz has been a mass of ruins and all but forgotten. Its reappearance in Shanghai courts has set local night life circles buzzing with reminiscences of the "good old days."

PRESIDENT TAKES OATH ON JANUARY 20, 1937
Norris Lame Duck Amendment Ends Inaugurations on March 4.

By EDWARD W. LEWIS.
United Press Staff Correspondent.
SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 13.—(UP)—The next President of the United States will be inaugurated in midwinter, January 20, instead of March 4, as a result of the Norris "lame duck" amendment.

Next year, despite its southerly location, finds winter often grim. As a result a snowstorm beating down on the capitol may be the inauguration greetings for the next president.

Four years ago a result of the Norris amendment, Mr. Roosevelt must take his oath of office almost eight weeks before the inauguration ceremony, often a blustering snow week even as far south as the languid Potomac.

Norris sponsored the constitutional amendment in the belief that the "lame duck" Congress, composed of a relic of the past, with its slow transportation arrangements.

Now with airplane and streamlined train, he argued the will of the people in a November election should react on legislation with the beginning of the new year after the election.

Congress Meets January 5.
Thus congress will meet—a new congress—on January 5, and a president be inaugurated on January 20 for the first time. President Roosevelt therefore finds himself the first president in history who has not cut short his term.

One major hazard to the inauguration has resulted from the Norris amendment. Previously a "lame duck" congress has met in January—a congress already organized to give official benediction to the electoral college count.

The new amendment provides that on January 6, one day after the new congress convenes, houses and senate will sit in joint session and give legal status to the electoral vote.

However, the possibility has arisen that the house—an admixture of political parties—may be unable to organize by that date. A strong "liberal bloc" conceivably could delay election of a new speaker so that the joint session would be delayed.

May Need New Law.
In that event a new law would have to be rushed through setting another date for verification of the electoral vote. This would be necessary in event of the house failing to organize, if a new president is to take oath on January 20.

Inauguration day often has been a day of rough weather, straining the physical strength of government officials, particularly of justices of supreme court who usually attend en masse.

March is blustery and dangerous in Washington. January is even more so. The capitol for several years past has been susceptible to New England winter weather. A spell of it in January could affect the clamor of inauguration. The drive from the White House to the capitol by the President and his successor conceivably could be through a driving blizzard.

Miss Alice DeLancey Davis Makes Debut at Reception and Ball

Mrs. Henry W. Davis introduced her beautiful debutante daughter, Miss Alice DeLancey Davis, to fashionable members of Atlanta society yesterday afternoon at a reception at her home on Clifton road in Druid Hills. The living room was decorated with yellow roses and chrysanthemums. The mantel was adorned with a graceful arrangement of yellow roses, and similar flowers were used in the reception rooms.

Handsome silver candelabra holding yellow candles were placed at either end of the exquisitely appointed table in the dining room, and silver ewers were filled with yellow roses. In the sun parlor and enclosed porch, smilax and palms were used as decorations, and the punch bowls were surrounded by mounds of autumn leaves and fruit.

The hostess and her daughter received the guests standing before a background of palms, ferns and smilax, and many exquisite floral tributes sent the popular debutante by admiring friends. Assisting in entertaining were Mesdames S. F. Boykin, W. C. Wardlaw, John DeSauters, R. C. DeSauters, C. E. Heath, Robert Vance and Calvin Prescott.

Miss Davis was gown in lustrous white satin, made along old-fashioned lines. The low décolleté was made off-the-shoulder, and the bouffant skirt added grace to the becoming dress. She wore lavender orchids on her shoulder.

Mrs. Davis wore sapphire-blue satin featuring a scarf, which encircled the neckline and fell gracefully from the shoulder at the back to form a short train. A sapphire-blue clip adorned the neckline, and she wore purple orchids. Miss Davis made her formal bow to younger members of the social contingent at an elaborate supper-dance at which her mother was hostess last evening at the Piedmont Driving Club. The entrance hall of the club was beautified with a low spreading arrangement of palms and autumn shaded flowers. In the foyer, smilax was garlanded around the ceiling and entwined the columns, and the punch tables were adorned with mounds of yellow chrysanthemums and snapdragons. Attractive arrangements of palms and variegated foliage plants were placed at either side of the steps leading into the ballroom.

The white columns in the ballroom were entwined with ropes of smilax, and clusters of smilax were suspended between the arches separating the columns. Hot house smilax circled the coffee table and on either side were placed flower vases filled with palms and yellow chrysanthemums. A large fern ball was festooned high above the mantel over the fireplace and on either side were arrangements of chrysanthemums and smilax.

In the dining line with Mrs. Davis and her daughter were Miss Elizabeth Adger and Miss Mary Green, of Charleston, S. C. They stood before a background of palms, smilax and wood-wartian ferns and a gorgeous array of flowers sent to the debutante by friends. A lovely white orchid adorned Miss Davis' white satin costume, and she wore a bracelet formed of garlanded smilax. Miss Adger wore champagne-colored slipper satin and a cluster of orchids. Miss Green was gown in silver lame and her flowers were orchids.

Peachtree Road Property Owners Respond to Project

In response to the Peachtree Garden Club's request to pave the sidewalks in connection with the club's beautification project, many property owners have decided to take advantage of Fulton county's free labor, and will furnish the material themselves, at a small cost, to pave the sidewalks.

Mrs. E. Anthony, with 200 feet frontage on Peachtree road, was the first property owner to accept the offer of the county to lay the poured concrete sidewalks.

County labor has completed grading the sidewalks on the west side of Peachtree road, from the city limits past Buckhead. When this work has been carried to Piedmont road, the east side of Peachtree road will be graded and covered with concrete.

Work on Keith's circle began on Friday, on a wooded tract of land extending from the John M. Slaton property and, circling to Pace's Ferry road.

This property has been owned by the family of Charles Keith for generations. Banks will be graded and planted, sidewalks leveled, and shrubs will be planted under the direction of Mrs. Jackson Dick. Miss Edith Harrison, landscape architect of the project, will design the plan.

Peachtree road has provided a general clean-up campaign has been started by the business houses, filling stations, and owners of property. Garbage contractors have agreed to place covers over trucks, and newshoppers have been cautioned against leaving papers in the road.

Hundreds of colored people employed in the Peachtree road section have been urged to become conscious of the sidewalks, especially at the street car stops. Employees of stores and janitors of apartments have agreed to keep the road clean. Home owners are checking up on their lawns and sidewalks. The constructive movement of the Peachtree Garden Club to beautify the road has proven a welcome undertaking.

Phi Delta Kappa Fraternity Gives Formal Dance Next Wednesday

Interest centers in the announcement by the Georgia Alpha Chapter of the Phi Delta Kappa fraternity of the plans for their annual formal dance which will be given Wednesday evening at the Druid Hills Golf Club. This event is to celebrate the ninth anniversary of the local chapter and is of particular interest at this time as the Beta Chapter of East Point, Ga., will be installed Sunday, November 15, by the Georgia Alpha Chapter and the young men in this group will be honor guests of this occasion.

Georgia Alpha Chapter was initiated on November 18, 1927, by the Tennessee Alpha Chapter of Chattanooga, Tenn. Since its inception the Atlanta Chapter has held a unique position in the social, civic and charitable activities of the city. The Phi Delta Kappa fraternity is the largest Greek letter fraternity of its kind in the United States, being non-scholastic in nature and incorporated in each state where there is a chapter. The local chapter is affiliated with the national organization and the new chapter at East Point, marking another milestone in the growth of the fraternity in the south.

Past presidents of the chapter are Lawrence Cole, Lane Hubbard, Paul Hammond, Thomas H. Eubanks, Kenneth D. Cooper, James M. Moore Jr., of Jacksonville, Fla.; Abaz McPherson and William MacFarley.

Admission to the dance is $2.00. Phi Delta Kappa lead-out, participated in by the Alpha and Beta chapters, at the conclusion of which the new charter will be presented to the Beta Chapter. Among the young ladies taking part in the lead-out will be Mesdames Adiel S. Florence, Mrs. and Mrs. J. A. Brinson and Mrs. and Mrs. Zach Layfield Sr.

Decorators Say, "Give Them Plenty of Rope"

By FLORENCE La GANKE.

The James Jackson family had twin boys who were 11 years old. Perhaps it was natural that they should be so interested in the water because their grandfather had been a sea-going man. Every summer the whole family packed up and went to the summer cottage on the coast where the boys had the time of their lives sailing a small boat.

It was that interest that led their mother to redecorate their room in the way she did. The room had bunk beds, one above the other in true ship fashion. She made bedsprings of blue cotton material, quite heavy. The line where they outlined the top of the bed was defined by a heavy cotton rope of white. The interior decorating suggested that this was a room fitting for the sailors' room but also extremely smart and good in the current decorating fashion. Rope is having a great vogue, especially the white cotton rope.

The decorator took a low easy chair and upholstered it in the same blue cotton material as was used for the bedsprings. She had festoons or swags of rope just below the seat cushion at the place where the pleated flounce joined the rest of the upholstery. The curtains were of the same blue cotton material, quite heavy. The line where they outlined the top of the bed was defined by a heavy cotton rope of white. ## FRIENDLY COUNSEL

By CAROLINE CHATFIELD.

Problems of general interest submitted by readers will be discussed in this column. Send questions to the editor, The Atlanta Constitution.

DEAR MISS CHATFIELD:

Since we were "little children" mother has taught us that there is no such thing as a happy marriage, and that however they start, they always end up the same way with each other wishing he or she were out of the mess. My sister believes this and says she will never marry for the sentence, but I am in love with a wonderful boy and I am going to marry him in spite of it.

What you say is true, but give me some arguments to throw at the family?

KATHARINE M.

Answer:

You know the old adage about the drunk man's always thinking the other man is drunk. The woman who has had a happy married life doesn't hesitate to tell the world that she is a push-over for marriage, thinks any marriage, however bad, is better than none at all and wants her daughters to follow her example. While the woman that has had a tough time of it is likely to take the other track—unless she is keen enough to observe that the high road is the better one. Marriage is one institution that isn't hurt by the growing and gripping of the crisis for one reason or other couldn't put it over in small style. The marriage bureau, main open and continue to do a record business. The divorce courts have never caught up with them yet; so there's a pretty good reason to consider the marriage bargain fairly to mulling.

It is perfectly absurd for an adult to assume that life can be happy all the time. Life is a continuous struggle, however you live. Life isn't a continuous song and dance with or without a partner. Yet, if anything, the music is going, round and round, put zest in the dance while it is in season, make the intermission pleasant, it is, in fact, its ultimate expression is MARRIAGE.

The trouble with some folks is they think marriage is a kind of magic that lets them out of head and heart work, relieves them of responsibility for unselfish and sacrificial service to one another. Marriage isn't a sinecure. It is a job, and it is signing up for a tandem sentence of hard labor. Men and women take into matrimony all the imperfections they were born with, and the faults they have gathered as they have gone along. If they can't adjust themselves to each other, the trouble is their own. The happiness of marriage is up to them. The bright love that lured them to the altar loses its lustre if they fail to play up to one another. They cannot cement their friendships unless they cultivate the same interests, for congeniality is the cornerstone of every satisfactory human relationship. If they aren't good sports, forgiving, forgetting and laughing off the disagreements that always arise when two people try to live together, they are forever going in or coming out of a tussle.

Maybe everybody that's in does "want out" at one time or another. So do those who are out "want in" at one time or another. It is human nature to see the grass greener, the daisies bigger and the path smoother on the other side of the fence. But are they? Nobody need hold a brief for marriage as long as young people fall in love with one another; for first thing they want to do is to put that love in perpetual care and experience of the ages has pretty well proven that marriage is the surest method of doing it.

LaFayette Weddings.

LA FAYETTE, Ga., Nov. 13.—The marriage of Miss Gona Lloyd, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Nidermaier of Bristol, Va., was solemnized November 7 at the home of the bride's cousin, Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Shankle, on the Hogan road near Bristol, Va. The Rev. J. B. Hawks, pastor of the Methodist church, at Kensington, officiating.

The bride wore a brown suit with brown shoes and a brown hat. The bridesmaids wore blue. The bride's father, Mr. J. L. Nidermaier, is the son of the late Mr. Nidermaier, who was a prominent citizen of Bristol, Va. He and his bride will reside in Bristol, where the former is superintendent of a printing company.

Mr. and Mrs. Bart T. Hogue will announce the marriage of their daughter, Anna Belle, to Ben H. Quarles, of LaFayette, on September 27, at Cleveland, Tenn.

Mr. Quarles is the son of D. F. Quarles and the late Mrs. Quarles, of Chattanooga. He is engaged in business here. He and his bride will reside in their home in Warthen street.

B. and P. W. Club.

Dr. S. V. Sanford, Chancellor of the University System of Georgia, discussed the need of schools of higher education in the teaching principles underlying civilization at the meeting of the Business and Professional Women's Club recently.

John D. Hoffman, accompanied by Carroll V. Ramsey, sang and led in the singing of club songs. Honor guests were Professor Jere A. Wells, superintendent of the Fulton County schools; Dr. George M. Sparks, dean of the evening school, University System of Georgia; and Mrs. Trotter, dean of women in the evening school. Mildred Seydel spoke on the needs of the Community Chest.

The program was in charge of the education committee, Miss Ada Booth, chairman. Miss Blanche E. Wood, president, presided.

SOCIAL TIDBITS A WEIGHT THREAT.

Peanuts and popcorn, caviar and cheese are the social tidbits that tease the reducer into overindulgence in calories several days out of the week. There isn't any secret about it—you'll either have to lead an ascetic calorie life or discard your hopes of a slim figure. The way of the reducer is clearly marked on this score, and it means renouncing the tasty dishes that go with bridges, teas and cocktail parties.

The good things on the social menu may seem trivial, but they come cumulatively. Salads, sandwiches and rich confections run a margin of only that, but your alcohol calories cannot be stored. They must be converted into energy just as soon as the tissues are saturated, all of which means that you food calories are excess energy and stored as fat.

In the meantime, the cocktail hour has sharpened your appetite for a hearty dinner. You want food and plenty of it—and dinner may range from 700 to 1,000 calories. That is almost enough to keep a reducer going all day. If you store 500 calories, you gain one-eighth of a pound in a day on food that means the downfall of your good intentions toward your figure.

The following list will open your eyes to the calorie content of some of the most commonplace party foods:

FOODS Calories
12 lean meats 100
1 olive 15
4 walnuts 105
12 almonds 105
8 SP 105
12 potato chips 100
4 sardines 100
Cream cheese, 1-3 pkg. 150
Rouffoulet cheese, 1 sector 150

Marion Talley, the young opera singer, who dieted and exercised her way to a slim figure and a new career, found pastries and sweets were the heaviest foods to give up in her determined fight against avoirdupois. She has lost 40 pounds in just a few months, and has found her waistline. But she didn't do it by accepting all the social calories that came her way.

Along with cocktails, it is easy enough to nibble and sip 500 calories in two hours' time. At the most, you burn 70 calories per hour sitting and talking, which leaves quite a margin of only that, but your alcohol calories cannot be stored. They must be converted into energy just as soon as the tissues are saturated, all of which means that you food calories are excess energy and stored as fat.

Contract Bridge

By ELY COLBERTSON.

World's Champion Player and Greatest Card Analyst.

Herewith is presented another portion of Mr. Colbertson's latest work on contract, "The Gold Book of Bidding and Play," which is being reproduced in this column in daily instalments.

When the Distributive No Trump Is Not Used.

The reader will notice that according to the schedule already shown, every 4-3-3 hand is classified in one of the levels of no trump bidding, depending upon the honor trick holding. These are, however, subject to modification, because different hands which count to the same number of honor tricks vary greatly in playing strength, depending upon their content of honor cards.

A hand with five bare honor tricks (spades A 4 3, hearts A 7 5, diamonds A 8 6 3, clubs A K 9) is no better than most hands with about four and one-half honor tricks, but seven or eight honor cards (spades K J 10, hearts A Q 7 3, diamonds K Q 7, clubs A 9 5). Most hands with five honor tricks are on bids in a suit, but one or more honor cards are good enough for a two notrump bid (spades K Q 9 5, hearts A J 6, diamonds K Q 10, clubs A Q J).

Hands containing six and one-half honor tricks, listed above as falling within the range of two no trump bids, are far better opening bids of three no trump when ten or more honor cards are held (spades A K 6, hearts K Q 7, diamonds K Q 10 5, clubs A K 7).

INSTALLMENT XVII.

"Then you know who did kill him," he said. But Jose shook his black head and shrugged his broad shoulders. "No, sir. Don't know. Know you no kill him."

"But," said Shane, more than puzzled. "But maybe you suspect who did it, eh?"

"No, sir," said Jose. "I dunno who did it. Maybe somebody. But know you didn't. So won't swear. Good-bye mister. Tanks."

Jose started off, but Shane, watching him for a moment, called him back.

"Jose," said Shane. "La Paloma needs a foreman. Hod'd you like to have the job?"

For a space the Mexican stared at Shane as though he had not understood the words. Then:

"You mean—mister—you mean you want me to be foreman of ranch?"

Shane nodded. "That's the idea," he said. "Foreman. Just like—like your brother was."

Jose Verdugo took the American's words a bit too literally.

"No, mister, no," he said. "Not all same my brother. Me—me good fella. Me be good foreman. Not like Sam. Him no good."

Shane had to laugh. "All right, Jose," he said. "That suits me. You be good foreman. You run the ranch the way she should be run. You know how, I reckon."

"Sure me know how," the Mexican assured him. "Me been foreman of another ranch, but no like. Too much woman there—too much woman. All time say, Jose what for you do this, what for you do that, why not you do this way? No good. You no have much woman at La Paloma. Make trouble. All time make trouble."

"No," said Shane. "Not a woman. None at all, Jose. Not a woman. A las for prophetic instinct. But the future was hidden from Shane O'Hara in the Sleeve of Night and Morn."

"All right then, mister," said Jose. "Now I go tell my boss at Cienegas me quit. Then I go to La Paloma, see what to do. Much to do, I bet. Sam no good foreman. You come La Paloma?"

Yes, Shane told him. "I'll go over right away. Wait for you. We'll look things over together."

"One-half hour, I be there," Jose assured him. "You betcha." He strode away, the new foreman of Rancho Paloma. It did not occur to Shane that he should have instructed Jose to give his present employer due notice, until Jose was out of sight. But he guessed that Jose would soon have quit anyhow. Too much woman, maybe.

In his library Shane found Don Timoteo, to whom he put the case for his departure from Soledad.

The old man smoked his pipe and studied Shane with his clear blue eyes and said nothing until the younger man had finished. Then:

"I think you're right, son," he returned his verdict. "Yes, I think you're right. Not, you must understand, that your presence at Soledad is an embarrassment to any of us. We're glad to have you here. I don't need to be so trite as to tell you that we know you have no more to do with Black Sam's death than President Roosevelt had. And I don't think I need to tell you that we are right behind you, all of us, all the time. But I don't think there'll be any more trouble about La Paloma. Black Sam's claim, I mean. If there is, you can arrange it with Jose. I believe your employment of him was a stroke of genius. Or diplomacy."

"Well, sir," said Shane. "I—I don't know quite why I did employ Jose. I guess—I guess it was because he came voluntarily to tell me that he didn't think I killed his brother."

Don Timoteo nodded. "I can understand that," he said. "Well—the ranch needs attention. Quite a lot, I'd say. And so it seems to me that you're doing the right thing. We'll be just as close neighbors as we could possibly be, son. And friends."

"You bet, sir," said Shane. "And—about the fiesta tonight. At San Felipe—Rose—Miss Delane—she thought I should go. But you see how it is, sir. It isn't that I'm afraid of looks and whispers. It's just that it doesn't seem quite good 'aste for me to go to a fiesta when—the suspicion still hangs over me in the public mind."

"Right again," said Don Timoteo. "I'll speak to Rose. She—she doesn't always think deeply enough. Only a kid yet."

"Thanks, Don Timoteo," said Shane earnestly. "I'll leave that to you. And the sooner I go to the Rancho Paloma, the sooner I have a hunch—I'll begin to find out who really killed Black Sam. After I do find out—who will be very different. I'll—I'll be free to do things I can't do now."

Don Timoteo gazed at him in silence. But his eyes smiled. He was a "salvo." A wise man.

That evening Shane, sitting on the porch of La Paloma with Jose Verdugo and discussing the condition of the ranch, saw a gay party in Spanish costume ride by. The Soledadians were on their way to the Spanish fiesta at San Felipe. Don Timoteo, a venerable Spanish don, rode with Mrs. Delane, in the lead. Rose's mother wore black mantilla and high comb and looked the great Spanish dabbler.

Behind them rode another caballeria and senorita, gay with the color of trappings of old Spain.

They were Rose and Don Fernando Miller.

Don Timoteo and Mrs. Delane waved to Shane.

Fernando bowed formally and removed his broad-brimmed black sombrero.

Rose tossed her head and kept looking at and chattering gaily to her escort until she was out of sight. Shane O'Hara—were behind.

Shane O'Hara, master of La Paloma, found his patrimony even more of a contrast to the broad and well kept acres of Rancho Soledad than he had guessed it to be at his first casual inspection.

It was, he told himself after he had gone the rounds in the morning sunlight, Jose Verdugo, at his heels like a big dog. Tenderfoot as he might be, the condition of the property was manifest. And matters less evident brought grunts and growls of disgust from Jose.

Shane had spent the night in the ranch house. It was a big, sprawling edifice of stout adobe—of which he was thankful—and Black Sam had occupied but a small portion of it. Rusty keys had unlocked doors which apparently had not been swung back for years, judging from protesting hinges and dust and spider webs. One of these which had been a bedroom and still was furnished with a small bed and chest of drawers, Shane and Jose had cleaned out as best they could. Shane had found blankets in one of the drawers, and took a chance of their being clean, which was the only thing he could do. Unless he could go to Soledad and borrow bedding for the night, which he had not dismissed immediately upon its arrival in his head; he had placed a discreet distance between himself and the folks at Soledad; let it remain—for the present.

He had slept well, despite a few dreams as crazy as dreams usually are, and had awakened early, the California sunshine in his eyes. Then he heard movements about the house, decided that they had awakened him.

He got up, sought water for his morning ablutions, and found it in the kitchen, where big Jose was industrious in washing dishes which had not been washed since the last election, cleaning shelves, and at the same time keeping a cautious eye upon the stove, where coffee was simmering, bacon frying in a skillet. A small kitchen table had been covered with a clean cloth, and had set a place for the master of the house. He himself had eaten his usual breakfast of frioles wrapped in tortillas and accompanied by black coffee and a nip of whisky, hours before.

"Morning, Jose," Shane had greeted him, and the big dark fellow had grinned and wished him a buenas dias, senior. Immediately followed by a remark concerning his relative.

"I think," he had said, "Sam be live like on cochino, senior—one peg."

"Well, Jose," Shane approved, "you're getting things cleaned up in fine shape. Looks like a different place already."

Jose smiled his appreciation.

"Pret' quick it looks like another place, I betcha. Now I'll throw eggs on the bacon. Continued Monday."

MANNERS OF THE MOMENT

A large dose of coyness is pretty trying to a bachelor.

Being the life of the party is all very well. Most parties need some life. But just the same we can't allow you to get coy to the point of exhaustion.

For example, flopping down on the floor and grasping the knees of the most bashful bachelor in the crowd may look very cute. It usually raises a lot of laughter. But it terrifies the poor bachelor. And we still have enough respect for bashful bachelors to think the custom should be abolished.

What's more the girl who does that sort of thing once, gets incorrigible. She starts leaning against all the men's knees. It gives her a chance to pull that upturned face—tunt, and somewhere she picked up the idea that an upturned face was fetching. Well, maybe it is. But it seems a little coy for a party. We think it should be reserved for fireside scenes with future (or on occasion, present) husbands.

FIGHTING BREAKS OUT MONGOL AND MANCHOUKOUAN TROOPS CLASH WITH CHINESE PATROLS.

PEIPING (Saturday) Nov. 14.—(UP)—Violent fighting between invading pro-Japanese forces and Chinese defenders has started in Suifu province according to dispatches today.

Chinese asserted they repelled the assaults but neutral reports indicated the Chinese were driven back at several points.

Fighting became general after patrols of the Mongol and irregular Manchoukoun troops which have been concentrating for weeks in Chahar clashed with Chinese patrols on Wednesday morning.

A general battle developed Wednesday afternoon and lasted until dawn Thursday.

The Chinese entrenched positions reported were broken in several places.

General Li's Troops.

The attacking troops were part of the command of General Li Shou-shan, said to be a subordinate of Prince Teh of Inner Mongolia, who declared his independence of China and declared himself the instigator of the Japanese army—early this year.

Several squadrons of airplanes alleged Japanese make participated in the attack. The troops and irregulars were well drilled and supported by heavy artillery and field guns.

The airplanes were said to have come from a big air base in Suifu, which, the Chinese assert, is under direction of the Japanese army.

Following the air bombing operations scouting planes, also allegedly Japanese, flew over the whole Chinese defense area. Seven scout planes were sighted by the Chinese on Thursday and all of them "were of the type used by the Japanese army."

Bandits Repulsed.

The Chinese command said that "the bandit attacks everywhere have been repulsed."

Neutrals believed, however, that if the Japanese army really is supporting the Mongols and irregulars, who heartily the conquest of Suifu is merely a matter of weeks. They anticipated then that the province will be added to the vast area of China already under virtual control of the Japanese army as part of its strategy in driving a wedge between Outer Mongolia—which is controlled by Soviet Russia—and China proper.

Indicative of the tightening Japanese control in North China was an announcement that, despite lack of approval of the central China government in Nanking, the proposed air line linking North China cities with Manchukuo and Japan will inaugurate service November 17.

The United States embassy yesterday finally received the formal notice of the Nanking foreign office requesting that Americans in Suifu and other potential war areas be asked to take refuge in Peiping and Tientsin. The request was referred to American consular authorities for action.

NEWS ADVERTISING SHOWS LARGE GAIN

Index Placed at 120.6, an Increase of Nearly 6 Points in October.

NEW YORK, Nov. 13.—(AP)—A big October advance in newspaper advertising was shown in the index of Editor & Publisher, weekly journal of newspapermen and advertising, it was announced today.

With all classifications except financial advertising showing in the advance, the index rose to 120.6, nearly 6 points higher than September's mark, and the highest point yet reached in the recovery period.

For the first time this year, newspaper advertising broke through the 1931 trend line.

National advertising was 30 per cent higher than in October, 1935, and its index standing rose to 128.1, the highest point reached by any classification.

Automotive advertising was 8.2 per cent ahead of October, 1935. Retail advertising was 13 per cent ahead, with department stores advancing more slowly than other retailers.

Classified advertising, which for several months has displayed a decline, made a substantial advance, but was surpassed by display. Classified ads in October were 16.1 per cent ahead of October, 1935.

These figures were based on actual measurements of the daily newspapers in 52 cities, as reported by Media Records, Inc.

BUTLER ON FORCE THIRTY-ONE YEARS

Police Twins Observe Friday, the Thirteenth, as Birthday.

Friday, the 13th, was the 31st anniversary of Captain G. T. Butler as a member of the police force and also the 46th anniversary of the birth of Atlanta's only twin policemen, Patrolmen Robert and Charlie Floyd.

The police force had only 80 men when Captain Butler joined it in 1905 and received a salary of $800 a month.

"We were given either a horse or a bicycle to ride," he said yesterday, "and we had to cover as much territory as the radio patrolmen cover today in their high-speed cars."

Patrolman Charlie Floyd, one of the twins, in ill health for more than a year, was at his home, while his brother, Robert, was on duty as usual.

CO-OP COMMISSION AND F. D. R. CONFERS

WASHINGTON, Nov. 13.—(AP)—President Roosevelt conferred today with the commission on the inquiry of European co-operative enterprises, and was told it could report within six weeks or two months.

UNCLE RAY'S CORNER

A LITTLE SATURDAY TALK.

Several weeks ago I spoke of the great number of Latin words which have come to us "through the French," and today I should like to talk more about the same subject.

French was the court language of England for a long while after William the Conqueror and his Normans conquered the country. Books were written in French, the nobles spoke French, and many priests and monks spoke French. In short, the Normans and their French allies "took the French language with them to England."

Most of the plain people in England kept on speaking Anglo-Saxon after the Normans came, so two great languages were spoken in England at the same time. In later centuries, words of both languages were combined in a single language, making "modern English." Modern English has some words from many languages, but it grew mainly from Anglo-Saxon and French.

Most of our short and more common words came from the Anglo-Saxons, who invaded England long before the Normans. Here are a few examples of Anglo-Saxon words in English as we speak it today: ox, sheep, calf, deer, good, man, woman, hand, and foot. I must mention a vast number of others.

Most of the French and Latin words in the English language are rather long, but there are some short and common words of French origin, such as pork, mutton, real, bacon, dinner, supper, bottle, master and servant.

From the French we obtained these words about laws and government: court, judge, jury, prison, prince and mayor. Among other French words in the English language are: city, county, money, rent, battle, standard, armor, tower, fortress, duke, marquis and baron. Thousands of other words which came to us from the French could be named.

The French language grew mainly from the Latin and that is why we can say we have so many Latin words "through the French." We also have words which came into the English language "straight from Latin." These include: pope, priest, and monk. French and Latin words are everywhere in our language, and also great numbers of long words, such as abduktion and abbreviate.

Next Saturday I shall tell about English words which came from American Indians, Danes and other folk.

F. D. R. PROCLAIMS THANKSGIVING DAY

President Designates November 26 for Gratitude to God for Blessings.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 13.—(AP)—President Roosevelt today proclaimed Thursday, November 26, as "a day of national thanksgiving" and asserted America stood ready to "promote international friendship and by the avoidance of discord, to further world peace, prosperity and happiness."

The text of the proclamation follows: "I, Franklin D. Roosevelt, president of the United States of America, do hereby designate Thursday, the 26th day of November, 1936, as a day of national thanksgiving."

"The observance of a day of general thanksgiving by all the people is a practice peculiarly our own, hallowed by usage in the days before we were a nation and sanctioned through succeeding years."

"Having safely passed through troubled waters, it is our right to express our gratitude that divine providence has vouchsafed us wisdom and courage to overcome adversity. Our great institutions have been maintained with no abatement of our faith in them."

"In our relations with other peoples we stand not aloof but make resolute effort to promote international friendship and by the avoidance of discord, to further world peace, prosperity and happiness."

"Done at the city of Washington this 12th day of November, in the year of our Lord 1936, and of the independence of the United States of America the 161st."

(Signed) Franklin D. Roosevelt.

AMERICAN OFFICIAL TO WED IN RUSSIA

MOSCOW, Nov. 13.—(AP)—American embassy officials were advised tonight that the scheduled marriage of United States Consul George Minor and Mildred Wright, both of Charleston, W. Va., would be performed Saturday by a Leningrad pastor substituting for the Rev. Mr. Stock, reported jailed on undisclosed charges.

Mr. Stock, a British-born German Lutheran clergyman, was said reliably to have been one of the dozen Americans arrested Wednesday in an alleged anti-Soviet plot. He was to have performed the wedding.

Arrangements with the Leningrad pastor were hastily completed, the American embassy was informed, when Minor and his fiancée arrived there from Helsinki and received telegrams from Moscow telling them of original arrangements had been disrupted.

O. O. KUHN RE-ELECTED BY MANAGING EDITORS

Savannah Is Named to Executive Board; New Orleans Is Picked.

CHICAGO, Nov. 13.—(AP)—The Associated Press Managing Editors' Association re-elected Oliver Owen Kuhn, of the Evening Star, Washington, D. C., general chairman today and named 18 members to the executive committee.

At the concluding session of their annual two-day convention, the editors voted to meet in New Orleans next year and to lengthen their convention to three days, devoting the additional one to a general discussion of local newspaper problems. The 1937 meeting will be held October 7, 8 and 9.

Members of the new executive board were:

Roy Roberts, of the Star, Kansas City; J. R. Record, of the Star-Tribune, Fort Worth, Texas; George H. Adams, of the Journal, Minneapolis; Palmer Hoyt, of the Oregonian, Portland, Ore.; H. O'Flaherty, of the Chicago Daily News, Chicago; R. W. Simpson, of the Tribune, Tampa, Fla.; Floyd Merrill, of the Tribune, Greeley, Colo.; Walter M. Macmillan, of the Daily Oklahoman, Oklahoma City; Basil Williams, of the Register-Tribune, Des Moines, Iowa; M. V. Atwood, of the Gannett newspapers, Rochester, N. Y.; John M. O'Connell, Jr., of the News, Bangor, Maine; Arthur Traynor, of the Booth papers, Saginaw, Mich.; J. A. Stuart, of the Star, Indianapolis; Clarke Salmon, of the Item-Tribune, New Orleans; J. P. Miller, of the Morning News and Evening Press, Savannah, Ga.; Marvin H. Cregar, of the Journal, Milwaukee; W. N. Howard, of the Plain Dealer, Cleveland; and Joseph O. LaGore, of the Sun-Democrat, Paducah, Kentucky.

Alan Gould, Associated Press general editor, opened the discussion of the press association's report. In his opening remark, he pointed out that sports had become "big business" in the United States, and that without exaggeration he believed about $25,000,000 was spent as a result of sport on one day at the height of the football season.

STOCK MANIPULATION CHARGED TO BROKERS

WASHINGTON, Nov. 13.—(AP)—The Securities Commission today charged the New York Stock Exchange with stock manipulation and asserted that without exaggeration he believed about $25,000,000 was spent as a result of sport on one day at the height of the football season.

The firm, as well as Michaels, was accused of manipulating stock of the Atlas Tack Corporation, which resulted in boosting the stock from $8.50 to $30.25 per share.

Partners named in the order were James M. Hutton, James M. Hutton, Jr., John Christie Duncan, Charles N. Foster, Joseph A. Hall, Carroll V. Geran, George C. Riley, W. E. Hutton, C. W. Hutton and Joseph A. W. Leitch.

Michels is a partner of the firm of William Cavalier & Co., which is now a member of the New York exchange and the New York Curb Exchange and other exchanges. The firm was not mentioned in the order.

Grand Launches Run Of 'Come and Get It'

Vigorous, romantic, entertaining are the words for "Come and Get It," starring Edward Arnold, which opened yesterday at Loew's Grand theater for a week's engagement.

Based on the story of the same name by Edna Ferber, the film tells a virile tale of the rise of Barney Glasgow, admirably played by Arnold, from lumberjack to lumber king.

In the process of climbing the ladder, Barney marries the boss' daughter. This breaks the heart of Frances Farmer, first seen as a dance hall girl in northern Wisconsin in the late 1920s, who leads her to Barney's best friend, Sven, unusually well played by Walter Brennan.

Sven is left later with a young daughter, also played by Miss Ferber. Barney marries the girl and is struck by her resemblance to the girl he jilted in the long ago, falls in love with her. Obstacles arise when Joe McCard, who also falls in love with her, and she with him. But romance isn't all the charm of "Come and Get It." There are some "shots" of life among the loggers, and some scenes showing methods in the logging country.

The excellent supporting cast includes Mady Christians, Andrea Gadea, Frank Shidley, tennis-playing fame, who is a good actor in addition to court accomplishments. Direction and photography are of high order. You'll like "Come and Get It." Short subjects round out the bill.

F. D. R. ESSAYIST WINS FREE TRIP TO HAVANA

NEW YORK, Nov. 13.—(AP)—The national for Roosevelt Association of Women Lawyers announced the successful culmination today of a two-week search for Mrs. Mary Flanagan, of Montrose, W. Va., entrant in its prize essay contest. "Why President Roosevelt Must Be Re-elected," Miss Adele L. Springer, national director of the association, said the prize, a trip to Havana, was awarded October 31 to Mrs. Flanagan, mother of ten children.

Unfortunately, Miss Springer said, Mrs. Flanagan had failed to put her address on the essay and it was not until today that she was definitely located on a farm, Montrose, W. Va.

FUNDS ARE ALLOTTED FOR IRWIN RURAL LINE

WASHINGTON, Nov. 13.—(AP)—Rural Electrification Administrator Morris L. Cooke announced today allotment of $2,750,000 for rural electrification line construction in nine states.

The funds will be used to build about 2,400 miles of line to serve approximately 3,000 rural customers in Alabama, Delaware, Georgia, Iowa, Missouri, Oklahoma, Tennessee, Texas and Virginia.

The allotments included: Georgia—$150,000 to Irwin County Rural Electrification Association to build 155 miles of lines for 650 customers.

Woman Gets Jail Term In Pistol Altar Plot

CHICAGO, Nov. 13.—(AP)—For her alleged attempt to lead a 44-year-old bachelor to the altar at the point of a pistol, Mrs. Esther O'Rourke, 20, was sentenced to seven days in the Bridewell by Judge Joseph H. Herms today.

She carried a weapon to "protect" her business from the attempt to take business Crocker, of Marlboro, Mass., to suburban Waukegan last Tuesday to marry him.

A disorderly conduct charge against Crocker was dismissed.

"Theodora Goes Wild"

Launched at Rialto

Theodora went wild at the Rialto theater last night and so did another packed first-night house as they roared and laughed approval of "Theodora Goes Wild," opening at the theater for a week's run.

Irene Dunne, undoubtedly the most beautiful than in any of her previous screen plays, takes the "going wild" role, a new one in her repertoire. But the way she played it, she is certain to have won the hearts of the audience from producers for more of the same.

Melvin Douglas tackles the man-sized job of playing opposite her in "Theodora Goes Wild." He makes the entire production ring true probably is the excellent selection of a supporting cast. Every character scores his or her fine point of excellent roles.

The story is built around a small-town girl who secretly writes a best-selling novel of the torrid variety, which shocks everyone in her town and gossip home town and shocks even her when she hears it read by an indignant member of the town's literary society. She finally breaks her secret authorship and throws it in the face of an astounded town. Then she goes New York and wild in a big way. The love angle is taken care of with the help of some beautiful scenery.

The story builds up rapidly and there is nothing but a takedown in the last act. A group of skillfully selected short subjects and special features complete a thoroughly entertaining background for the enchanting "Theodora Goes Wild" at the Rialto this week.

High Praise Accorded To "Anthony Adverse"

Superbly played by a stellar cast headed by Frederic March, the screen version of Hervey Allen's modern classic, "Anthony Adverse," thrilled an opening performance audience yesterday at the Fox theater, where the film will remain a week.

Retaining all the sweep and fire of the lengthy book, special praise for the handling of the story should go to Mervyn Leroy, the director. Praise, too, should be bestowed upon the men who photographed the film.

An extraordinary advance in the art of the screen is the story of the film. Another splendid portrait to his gallery. Once more he reveals himself as one of the finest actors in Hollywood. He fits the story like a glove and he puts it mildly.

The supporting cast also does much to make the film one of the most enjoyable seen in this city in a long while. Olivia de Havilland, as Angela, Anita Louise as Maria; Claude Rains as Don Luis, and Louis Hayward as Denis Moore, are just a few who deserve commendation.

Bows also must go to Edmund Gwenn, Gail Sondergaard, Steffi Dunan, Billy Mauch and Akim Tamiroff. Besides the principal cast, a number of other actors appear in the film, which is a brisk and faithful condensation of the nearly half-million words of the book, captured into more than 400 of the best thrilling scenes ever filmed.

Naturally, the film runs beyond the usual length of feature pictures, but the excitement is kept at such a high pitch that the scenes are of such interest that the slightly more than two hours pass all but too quickly.

Readers of the book will find the cinema transcription of the novel more than adequate, and for those who are unfamiliar with the story, the film will prove a delight, with the added zest of seeing a great story for the first time.

SHORT TERM CREDITS TO ITALY SHOW GAIN

NEW YORK, Nov. 13.—(AP)—Bankers here said today there seemed to be a small increase in short term credits granted Italian corporations, through Italian banks, to finance imports of American products, notably cotton, wool and corn.

Requests for larger credits to enable wheat and corn imports, however, appeared not yet to have been granted, they said. Prior to the Ethiopian war, the United States had granted Italy $100,000,000 in credits.

Grants of such credits to Italian corporations was considered by bankers here not in violation of the Johnson Act, which prohibits loans to governments in default in debt payments to the United States.

Starting Backfield Is Minus Joe Riley

Alabama's Crimson Tide, lighter than in many years, but fast as red streaks of gunfire, are shown above as the Tech Jackets will see them this afternoon at Grant field. Only 13 points have been scored on the Tidesmen this season, which is the same number opponents have scored on Fordham. The starting team, above, is minus Tarzan White, truck horse guard, and Joe Riley, triple-threat spark plug of the backfield. Both are injured. Reading, left to right, the line includes:

Greenies Favored To Whip Bulldogs

Vandiver Opens at Half With Stevens Out; Jenn Johnson Will Aid Attack.

By Ralph McGill.

EN ROUTE NEW ORLEANS WITH GEORGIA FOOTBALL TEAM, Nov. 13.—Georgia's battered Bulldogs moved out of Atlanta early tonight for New Orleans and the Tulane game on Saturday afternoon the underdogs, doped to lose by two touchdowns.

But Georgia goes in determined to carry on the fight which won for them the Florida game last week. Big Bill Hartman, the sparkplug of that game, will play tomorrow although he is not in the best of condition. Tulane, featuring the speedy Bucky Bryan, is reported in the best of condition for the game and the team is trying to make a comeback after their defeat by Alabama last week.

JOHNSON WILL PLAY. Harry Stevens, a left halfback who kicks, passes and runs with the ball, and Spec Towns, Georgia's great hurdler and spectacular end, are injured and unable to play. Their loss, particularly that of Stevens, is rather severe. The report Glenn Johnson would not play was corrected tonight by the coaches.

Johnson will play and will carry a large part of Georgia's offensive burden, because it is hoped that this spinner will be as effective as were those of Al Miot in handling Tulane's severe defeat last year.

G. M. A. DEFEATS DARLINGTON, 19-0

Johnny Bosch Leads Cadets in Victory Over Rome Eleven.

G. M. A. won its second straight victory over a Rome opponent with a 19-0 decision over Darlington School Friday afternoon on the College Park campus. And it was the second straight game which the Cadets have held their opponents scoreless and brings the win column up to four for the season.

Johnny Bosch, Atlanta boy, threw a 40-yard touchdown pass to Beals for the first play of the game after G. M. A. had held Darlington and received the punt.

That was the spark which touched the G. M. A. fireworks off to the two more scores in the second half, after a game Darlington eleven had turned back several G. M. A. threats in the second quarter.

A forward, lateral, with Bosch carrying the ball some 20 yards, paved the way for the second touchdown, after which Bosch dived over the line for the remaining 3 yards. Bosch scored the final touchdown late in the game on a short line buck, after the Cadets had made two first downs. Bosch returned a Darlington punt some 25 yards to start the last touchdown march.

Not only did the G. M. A. offense click beautifully but the defense was so tight, even with the reserves playing a large part of the game that Darlington was held to only one first down and that in the third quarter. Bosch was easily the outstanding star of the game, scoring two touchdowns, directing the G. M. A. attack, throwing passes and returning several punts for nice gains.

Ticket played well in the Darlington line.

RUSSELL BEATS MARIST, 19 TO 0

Russell High moved into second place in the North Georgia Interscholastic conference standings with a 19-0 victory over Marist College, bitter Atlanta rival, Friday afternoon on the East Point field.

It was a rough game all the way, with penalties coming frequently and late in the game a player from both Marist and Russell were banished from the game.

Russell scored early in the first quarter when Boatwright went wide around end for 40 yards and a touchdown. He was given some fine blocking all the way.

Miller scored in the second quarter on a 12-yard sprint, and a 35-yard pass, Davis to Roberts, netted the final score in the third quarter. Russell outgained Marist all the way and was in scoring territory in every quarter, but lacked the necessary yardage for more than three touchdowns.

Marist was heavily outweighed and failing to gain through the line, resorted to a forward passing attack, which clicked only at times and not enough to gain consistently.

EN ROUTE NEW ORLEANS WITH GEORGIA FOOTBALL TEAM, Nov. 13.—If I do not see someone smile in a moment or two I am going to burst into tears myself.

All this morning I sat around with the saddest man in the world. That was Mr. Frank Thomas, of Alabama. He was the saddest man in the world because Joe Riley, his best halfback, his kicker, his passer and his runner, was out with a bad ankle.

I went with Mr. Thomas while he had the ankle doctored. And Mr. Thomas' face looked like the face of a man who has had woe for breakfast, misery for lunch and is looking forward to a bowl of sadness for dinner. Every time the limping Joe Riley took a step, Mr. Thomas winced as if his own ankle was hurting.

And on getting to the train tonight with Georgia there was another group of worried coaches. Harry Stevens will not play. The worry was so thick one could stumble over it.

If I had just had one of those Russian novels where the people become so discouraged they shoot themselves or take poison on practically every page, it would have been just perfect.

This football business can generate more gloom than any other business. Georgia coaches and the team feel improved. The tonic of the Florida victory was a great help to the team. They could use some more of it. But the odds are against them. Rather heavily. The Bulldogs are a very, very long shot tomorrow.

TULANE TO BE READY.

When the Tulane team was engulfed by the Crimson Tide, a wholly unfounded story bounced out that Bernie Bierman would be returned to Tulane.

This has burned the team to a toast because one and all seem very fond of Red Dawson and think he has done a good job. The team will be out there pounding away at Georgia. The Bulldogs never have any luck. They usually meet a team primed and ready with an unusually strong performance.

The Georgia team is prepared for a first-rate struggle, too, and if they can get a break or so they may make this a great football game. Given a lot of luck, they can win.

I asked Frank Thomas about his game with Tulane which his team won, 34 to 7.

"We had to change our defense three times," he said. "They got a lot of power on their wide end runs. And plenty of speed with it. They almost ran us out of the stadium in the first three minutes. I think the team is a little better than it looked against us."

THE YELPS OF PAIN.

Loud yelps of pain were heard around the corners where the gamblers ply their trade of taking money from suckers. They were giving 12 and 13 points until they heard that Joe Riley was hurt and had little chance to play. The odds dropped rapidly.

Riley hurt his ankle in a little pass practice late Thursday. He arrived in Atlanta yesterday barely able to walk. His ankle was given a treatment of baking and soaking. The odds are he will not play at all. If so he will not be efficient.

"There," said Thomas sadly, "is a fellow who gained 175 yards against Kentucky and about the same distance against Tulane. You can't laugh off a loss like that."

THINGS BRIGHTEN UP.

Things brightened up a bit after the train got well on the way to New Orleans. The talk turned to food.

A gourmet was speaking of oysters Rockefeller. They are oysters baked in the shell and covered with a sauce the flavor of which is magnificent. When the chef who invented them cast about for a name, he said they should be named for the richest man in the world. It is a bit ironic the richest man in the world has a digestive apparatus which will not permit him to eat them.

L. S. U.-AUBURN TO DRAW 25,000

Old Lou Slight Favorite in Important Game at Birmingham.

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., Nov. 13.—(AP)—Two of the deep south's gridiron leaders, Louisiana State and Auburn, worked out briefly here this afternoon as feverish followers poured into the city by the thousands for their "climax" engagement at 2 p. m. (central standard time) tomorrow.

Advance seats sales indicated an attendance of 25,000, capacity for Legion field. Clear, warm weather, was indicated.

Pre-game gossip made Louisiana the favorite, but by no great odds. Both teams are studied with veterans of their battle at Baton Rouge last year, won in the last minute of the game by L. S. U. 6 to 0.

Coach Bernie Moore, of the invaders, declined to predict the outcome but said he expected Auburn to be "L. S. U.'s toughest foe." Moore's team is unbeaten, but was held to a 6-6 tie in an early season game with Texas.

Auburn also is undefeated in Southeastern Conference circles, but was tied 0-0 by Tulane, and lost an inter-sectional contest to Santa Clara, 12 to 0.

The game will bring Captain Walter Gilbert, Auburn's All-Southeastern center in 1935, and Marvin Stewart, L. S. U. star pivot man, together in individual competition which may determine their final rankings. Both have been mentioned as possible All-American material.

L. S. U. will have a decided weight advantage, but most of it is in the backfield, where the Auburn quartet averages but 168 lbs. Auburn line averages 193, four pounds less than L. S. U.

Seven special trains left late today bearing 4,000 Louisiana State University students and supporters, the university's 200-piece band, and the live mascot, "Mike the Tiger," to Birmingham.

VANDY-TENNESSEE.

NASHVILLE, Tenn., Nov. 13.—(AP)—Vanderbilt's grimly determined Commodores went through a light drill this afternoon to end their preparations for the Tennessee game tomorrow as thousands of frenzied partisans streamed into town to witness the 33d renewal of this annual dogfight.

The Vols arrived in Murfreesboro 32 miles from Nashville, this afternoon in time for a light workout. They will remain there until shortly before game time tomorrow.

Business Manager Bill Schwartz said less than a thousand of the 21,250 seats in Dudley stadium were available and a complete sellout was certain for the always colorful battle. It will be a battle between teams coached by strangers—Ray Morrison, of Vandy, having never met or even seen the Tennessee mentor, Bob Ney.

Alabama Crippled For Jackets Today

Joe Riley, Tarzan White Won't Start; Tech Conceded Real Chance.

By Jack Troy.

Georgia Tech's Yellow Jackets enter the game with Alabama's unbeaten Crimson Tide this afternoon at Grant field virtually an even choice. Kick-off time is 2 o'clock.

Late developments force the conclusion that Tech, while not the favorite, may win.

To go even stronger, it is the firm conviction of this corner that Tech will win.

An unkind fate has robbed the Alabama team of Joe Riley, slender wasp-hipped left halfback of the Crimson Tide.

Joe Riley will not start. In fact, if he is used at all, Coach Frank Thomas will conge it a miracle. And it will be, no less.

Because Riley, the triple-threat ace of the Alabama team, signal caller and sparkplug to boot, weighs only 155 pounds and is susceptible to injury, Coach Thomas has scrimmaged him but little this season.

WRENCHES ANKLE. Riley has lived the life of Riley in practice. But Thursday afternoon he was passing on a slippery field and wrenched his left ankle. He had to be carried off the field.

And yesterday Riley, visiting a local ankle specialist, was given little assurance that he could play at all Saturday. He limped into Grant field in civilian clothes yesterday.

Tarzan White, Alabama's All-American guard candidate, also is injured. White, who suffered a severe hip injury in the Tulane game, was given treatment yesterday.

While unable to practice, White may be available in a reserve role this afternoon. It is not likely he will be used for any length of time, however.

Loss of these two players is a rather saddening blow to Coach Thomas, but one should not feel unduly sorry for him in view of the reserves on hand and also the other first stringers who are in prime condition.

NO ELEPHANTS. Alabama does not have a team of giants this year. It's a team almost comparable to the 'Bama teams of long ago: the teams of the era of the "thin red line."

And yet the weight is admirably distributed and the current Crimson Tides, candidates for every bowl game in the land, are fast as red streaks of gunfire.

Alabama may miss the passing of Joe Riley. Maybe not. For Joe Kilgore, right half, is a fine passer, himself. Kilgore also can handle the kicking very well, thank you.

Kilgore will, of course, call the signals in Riley's absence. And he will carry the ball in his spare time. Alabama's starting backfield will include Kilgore, left half; Blackie Caldwell, right half; Victor Bradford, quarterback, and Bubber Nisbet, captain and fullback. Bubber is a Bainbridge (Ga.) boy.

The starting line will embrace Peron Shoemaker and either Ben McLeod or Tut Warren, ends; Bill Young and Hump Lyon, tackles; Lewis Bostick and Leroy Monsky, guards, and Lamar Moye, center.

RESERVE STRENGTH. 'Bama has ample reserve strength. Of course, loss of Bill Peters, regular guard who recently underwent an operation for appendicitis, and White, the other varsity guard, hurts. But Alabama has fine guards in Monsky and Bostick, and plenty more where they came from.

It might not be a bad idea to watch the play of Shoemaker, the right end. He's a ball of fire in action. Georgia Tech will not have the reserve strength to match Alabama's.

Tech Luncheon Today at Noon

Georgia Tech football players of former days, through the class of 1936, will join with the Tech alumni in general at the annual home-coming luncheon, cafeteria plan, in the Tech dining hall at 12 noon, Saturday. The dining hall is located opposite the east side of the stadium, near which plenty of parking space will be available, at the time of the gathering.

All Georgia Tech alumni, their families and friends, are invited to the luncheon to meet with their classmates and the reunion classes of '91, '96, '01, '06, '11, '16, '21, '26, '31 and '36. A portrait of Captain Lyman Hall, second president of Tech, will be presented to the college by the class of 1936, during the get-together. The home-coming will adjourn at 1:15 for the Tech-Alabama game.

Declares Story Concocted To Shield Paternity of Newly Born.

Confronted with physicians' reports stating she had given birth to a child, Mrs. Crawford told District Attorney Fred Sidney Crawford she was born in the back yard of her one-room cabin home Sunday night and that she concocted the story it had been there for 10 years. She would conceal its paternity from her husband.

District Attorney Crawford said she named a relative of her husband as the five-day-old infants' father. The man named by Mrs. Crawford vigorously denied her accusation, Fred cried.

Crawford, 44, who earns $26 a month as a highway show worker, was quoted as saying he was "not going to live with a woman who has this kind of a character. At first, however, he said he would stick by his wife.

7. Mrs. Crawford objected bitterly, de-
36 claring she found the baby and had 63 right to keep it, but surrendered his 54 when served with Simmons' order.
52 Reports followed that the child
10 had been abandoned by hitch-hiker but investigations proved these baseless.

Then came Mrs. Crawford's assertion last night that the baby was her son and that she "thought up" the defense story "because I didn't want my huband to know about it."

"I was afraid if he found out it was his he'd harm him and go to jail."

She came today, accompanied by her husband and her aged mother-in-law, Coroner F. F. Young, Jr., and Dr. Dr. Mrs. Crawford had given birth to a baby "without the question of a doubt within the past few days." She said she had been told by a doctor said she told him the baby was born to her in the middle of the night but she a little straw fire in her yard. She said she had been told by a doctor she did a few days before because I didn't want my husband to know anything about it." With the baby normal and healthy at Charity Hospital. Half a hundred offers have been made to adopt him, but its hands of the hands of the hands of the juvenile Officer Simmons.

DR. WILLIAM HAGOOD
PASSES AT MARIETTA*Rites Will Be Held This Afternoon for Prominent Young Citizen.

MARIETTA, Ga., Nov. 13.—Dr. William H. Hagood, young dentist here and member of a prominent Marietta family, died this morning from a heart attack, at his home on Church street.

He had been practicing in partnership with his elder brother, Dr. George F. Hagood Jr., since last August. His father, Dr. George F. Hagood Sr., is a widely known general practitioner. A brother, Dr. Muri Hagood, is a surgeon at a Marietta hospital.

Dr. Hagood attended the Marietta public schools, was a star forward of the local basketball team and was also a member of a number of school organizations. He graduated from Atlanta Southern Dental College in 1935. He attended a Cincinnati Dental hospital prior to his beginning practice here.

He is survived by his father, mother, and two brothers.

Funeral services will be held tomorrow afternoon at 3 o'clock from the First Methodist church, Rev. T. Z. B. Everett and Rev. H. M. Strozio officiating. Interment will be in Mount View cemetery. Mayes Ward & Company in charge.

C. M. E. SESSION HEARS REPORTS AT HARTWELL

HARTWELL, Ga., Nov. 13.—The second day's meeting of the Georgia Colored Methodist Episcopal conference in session here was featured by the reading of reports. The reports of the presiding elders showed improvements in every department of the church.

Rev. O. B. Jackson, Elberton district; E. C. Beckham, Augusta district; and H. E. Benson, Atlanta, reported a marked increase in church funds raised and in membership.

The conference suspended its regular business in order to hold an open forum on the department of religious education. Dr. Julian Smith, general secretary of religious education, explained the work and needs of the department. The department was presided over by Rev. W. C. Livingston, one of the oldest pastors of the conference. He has served 30 consecutive years as a pastor in the Georgia conference.

Rev. T. A. Clayton, Rome, presided the Monday session, and Rev. J. D. Hudson presided the Tuesday session.

The Women's Missionary Society holds regular sessions daily.

GEORGIAN IS INJURED
IN CLASH ON TANKER*CHARLESTON, S. C., Nov. 13.—

(AP)—G. A. Smith, of Columbus, Ga., a University of Georgia student, reported today he suffered a fractured jaw in a clash with seamen aboard the strike-bound tanker Virginia Sinclair.

Smith said he and another student, whose name was not revealed, went aboard the tanker early this morning while on a sightseeing tour. He said the seamen apparently mistook them for job seekers and Smith said one of them knocked him down. Then, he said, his companion seized him by the collar and, grasping an ax handle, beat their way out of the melee.

METHODIST MINISTER SAYS WAR IS IMMINENT*South Georgia Conference at Columbus Hears Attack on Liquor Industry.

By RICHARD McMURRAY.
COLUMBUS, Ga., Nov. 13.—(AP)—Caldwell, war imminent, Rev. H. H. Crossfield urged the United States today to nationalize the munitions industry to insure peace. He was speaking at the morning session of the South Georgia Methodist conference here.

The Birmingham minister's address was followed by an attack on the liquor industry. Members of the conference were urged to get busy on the legislature because the liquor people already are at work.

Mr. Crossfield said prospects of a European war are vastly more dangerous than they were in 1914.

He charged the country's entrance into the World War was forced by munitions makers and farmers "who fought it hard to run blockades and sell their goods" to belligerents abroad.

"Our munitions factories should be nationalized," he said, "unless we are willing to renounce profit in war, we will be in war before you know it."

Sees U. S. Involved.
He charged excessive military preparations and economic interests would tend to draw the United States into the next conflict.

"The love of money is the root of all war," he said.

He charged Europe was made trips to Europe every two years to check conditions. He has just returned.

"There is a possibility of Europe going into war at any moment," he said. "Russia is on her toes ready for what they consider an inevitable war. France is getting ready, spending five times as much as she did in 1914. Europe has twice more men in armies than in 1914."

He criticized federal spending for armaments, saying:

"Liquor traffic is the greatest enemy of Christ," he said. "We must not be affected by the cry of the church in politics."

Bishop Anshworth said "We need a new Paul Revere to warn the people against the grave dangers of liquor."

Union Predicted.
The bishop predicted union of all branches of the Methodist church by 1940.

The conference approved relationship of the retired ministers' association. Several addressed the gathering.

The conference also took steps to provide a home for their retired ministers here.

Rev. Horace T. Free offered a resolution asking a committee be organized to investigate the possibility of establishing a home for the retired ministers of the North Georgia and North Alabama conferences as leaders in this type of endeavor. The resolution passed unanimously.

NEW YORK CITIZENS
VISIT GEORGIA COAST*BRUNSWICK, Ga., Nov. 13.—

A party of prominent New York citizens, including one candidate for floor leader of the national house of representatives and two prospective candidates for mayor of New York, who are guests of Philip Berolzheimer on Little St. Simons Island, were entertained yesterday afternoon at a barbecue on St. Simons Island.

Berolzheimer, owner of the small coastal Georgia island and former New York city chamberlain, and his party will remain for the opening of the deer hunting season at which time the annual drive of the Little St. Simons will be held.

New Yorkers in the party include Representatives John O'Connor, Michael J. Curran, New York city clerk, William Brunner, president-elect of the New York board of aldermen; Eugene Schultz, secretary of the bar of the Bronx; Judge of the Bronx court, Dr. William A. Lucia, Queens county physician; Edward Buckley, former deputy controller, and Sam Foley, district attorney of the Bronx county.

Representative O'Connor is a candidate for floor leader of the national house and both Brunner and Patterson are being groomed as likely Democratic candidates for mayor of New York in next fall's election.

Congressman Robert Ramspeck, Atlanta, was also a guest at the barbecue.

HUNTING ACCIDENT IS FATAL TO AUGUSTAN*AUGUSTA, Ga., Nov. 13.—

Thomas E. Rhoads, 22-year-old Augusta carpenter, died at a local hospital last night, three days after he accidentally shot himself while hunting in Columbia county.

The accident happened when Rhoads' shotgun slipped from his hand, struck a stump on which he was standing, and discharged. The load of both barrels struck the hunter, hospital attendants said.
